

Nazi Activity Grows at French Channel Ports; England Keeping Alert

Weather and Tides Combine To Favor Promised Blitzkrieg

London—(AP)—Increasing Nazi activity at French channel ports, reported by British bombers returning from raids deep into Germany, kept England on the alert today as tides and weather combined to offer Adolf Hitler more favorable conditions for his long-promised blitzkrieg.

Authoritative sources indicated the royal air force, attempting to smash any invasion before it could be launched, was hurrying more and more planes into nightly attacks on German industrial centers, troop concentrations and channel bases.

The air ministry reported, meanwhile, three Messerschmitt fighters were shot down this morning as Spitfire pilots continued to carry the war into the Nazi camp.

Two of the Messerschmitts were shot down on the far side of the English channel, within range of German anti-aircraft guns, by a squadron of nine Spitfires, the air ministry said.

"Almost at the same time, another Spitfire squadron shot down a third Messerschmitt 109 fighter on the English side of the channel," an official description of the battle added.

British Plane Down

The British reported the loss of one plane.

"It was four miles north of Calais that the first squadron of Spitfires met the enemy," the account said. "There were five of the enemy patrolling, as they thought, in comfortable security."

"The squadron leader began the attack. He fired a burst into one of the Messerschmitts as it dived to escape. He saw it hit the sea. So did a fellow pilot."

"Then he fired two long bursts at another Messerschmitt which was trying to get its own fire back on one of the Spitfires."

"Smoke poured from the Messerschmitt, but in the middle of the action it was impossible to follow it down, so it is not claimed as a certain casualty."

"A sergeant pilot caught yet another Messerschmitt as it was doing a stall turn. This, too, crashed into the sea."

"Meantime another British pilot was hard on the tail of an enemy fighter which at an early stage had made a dash for the French coast. Fragments were seen breaking off its port wing and the enemy fell away toward France. It must have had difficulty in making a safe landing."

German bombers kept up their scattered attack on England with a series of raids during the night which, the government said, resulted in the death of one person, a few other casualties, and "negligible" damage.

10 Lives Lost In Wisconsin Over Weekend

Six People Hurt, Two Critically, in Crash At Leppia's Corners

Outagamie county's highway accident and injury toll jumped up several notches over the weekend, aided by Saturday night's heavy rains, as 10 people lost their lives in mishaps in Wisconsin.

Six people were injured, two critically, in a crash at Leppia's Corners, the junction of Highways 45 and 10 west of Appleton at 10:20 Sunday morning.

Mrs. Frank Evans, 52, 614 E. Division street, Shawano, and her daughter, Dorothy, 18, are in critical condition at St. Elizabeth hospital as a result of the accident in which two cars were involved.

The mother and daughter and Mr. Evans, 60, were passengers in a car driven by Glenn R. Schlingerman, 21, 1123 E. Mason street, Green Bay. Schlingerman was driving south on Highway 45 and was crossing Leppia's Corners, scene of several other major accidents, when his car, driven by Leander Wood, 404 Center street, Mankato, Minn., collided. Mr. Wood, accompanied by his wife, was returning to Minnesota after visiting relatives in Green Bay.

All four of the occupants of the Schlingerman car were thrown out and the machine rolled over five times, according to Jack Frenz, Outagamie county highway policeman. Mrs. Wood was also thrown out of the car, in which she was riding.

The injuries as listed by an attending physician this morning were as follows:

Dorothy Evans, pelvis broken, dislocated spine, internal injuries, right arm and hand injured.

Mrs. Evans, concussion of the brain, most of the ribs on one side fractured, collar bone broken, shock.

Frank Evans, multiple contusions, shock.

Mrs. Leander Wood, 55, both ankles broken.

Mr. Leander Wood, 59, bruised and cut.

Glenn R. Schlingerman, ankle injury.

After the accident, witnesses noticed that the diamond in a ring worn by Mrs. Wood was missing. It was found after a few minutes search in gravel along the highway by Harvey DeBruin, who operates a tavern at the corners.

Neck Injured

Mrs. Joseph Spevachek, 1842 S. Wesley avenue, Berwyn, Ill., was treated at St. Elizabeth hospital Saturday for neck injuries suffered when a truck struck a car in which she was an occupant. The mishap occurred at Leppia's Corners.

William Foote, 28, 328 E. Washington street, and Elizabeth Morse, 25, 816 W. Cook street, New London, were injured at 12:30 Sunday morning when the car in which they were riding struck a culvert on Highway 76 about two miles west of the junction with Highway 10.

Foote was driving west at the time of the accident, according to Outagamie county highway police.

Senate Gets Bill to Register 12 Million from 21-30 Years

Pershing Says U. S. Should Aid Britain

Washington—(AP)—A proposal to send beleaguered Britain at least 50 American destroyers carried today the endorsement of General John J. Pershing.

The man who commanded American soldiers in France during 1917-18 declared that destroyers left over from World War days should be made available to the British as a safeguard of American freedom and security.

Pershing said that the most critical time for England would come in the next few weeks and months, Pershing said in a radio speech last night.

"If there is anything we can do to help save the British fleet during that time, we shall be failing in our duty to America if we do not do it."

The general of the armies said he saw "grave danger" for the United States in the present world situation, and blamed disasters in seven of eight nations on "appeasers who would not take the danger seriously, who would not prepare while there was still time."

Pershing's appeal recalled that in June the British had failed in efforts to purchase destroyers here. Another plan, which would have allowed the British to buy 20 high-speed torpedo boats, ran aground on a 1917 law forbidding the sale of American vessels of war to a belligerent nation.

Pershing declared that "today may be the last time when by measures short of war we can still prevent war (for the Americas)."

Asserting that the United States "must be ready to meet force with a stronger force," he said:

"We must make ourselves strong by building up our army and navy and establishment of the principle of universal selected service."

Non-Intervention Is Urged by Lindbergh

Noted Aviator at Peace Rally Pleads For American Cooperation With Europe

Chicago—(AP)—American opinion is now definitely and overwhelmingly against involvement in the European war, says Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The noted American aviator, in an address yesterday at a peace rally at Soldier field, urged "cooperation" with Europe "in our relationships with the other peoples of the earth."

Cheered by a crowd estimated at 40,000 by General Park Superintendent George T. Donohue, Col. Lindbergh in his broadcast speech said that agitation for America's entry into the European conflict had increased with alarming rapidity.

"But," he said, "when the danger of foreign war was fully realized by our people, the underlying tradition of American independence arose and in recent weeks its voice has thundered through the weak cries for war."

Col. Lindbergh pleaded for American cooperation with Europe—although advocating the non-interference of this nation in Europe's internal affairs.

"It is only by cooperation that we can maintain the supremacy of our western civilization and the right of our commerce to proceed unimpeded throughout the world. Neither they nor we are strong enough to police the earth against the opposition of the other."

"In the past we have dealt with a Europe dominated by England and France. In the future we may have to deal with a Europe dominated by Germany. But whether England or Germany wins this war, Turn to page 13 col. 6

Willkie, Farm Leaders Confer

Republican Nominee Declares He Will Campaign on Issues

Des Moines—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie told a cheering crowd today at the state capital grounds that the projected defense program should involve a major decentralization of industry.

Speaking briefly after attending a farm conference in the office of Governor George A. Wilson, Willkie said that munitions and arms factories "should be located in many towns like those that are scattered all over Iowa."

Willkie added that one major element of defense was industrial processes. He remarked that industry had tended to concentrate in large cities during recent years but that now it should be "brought back to the medium-sized town, so that there can be industry and prosperity all over the country."

At one point in his address, Willkie told the listeners that Agriculture Secretary Henry A. Wallace was a "fine gentleman and Turn to page 13 col. 5

Learn Europe's Lesson, Phil LaFollette Urges

The same energetic Phil LaFollette, his hair a little grayer perhaps, stood under a warm August sun Sunday afternoon at Pierce park, tugged at his blue suspenders, and told a gathering of about 800 Outagamie county Progressives that "if there is any blood to be shed for our country, all of us will shed our share, and there will be plenty of room for newspaper editors and radio speakers to get in there and shed, too."

He told his listeners, emphatically, that the American system must be changed to cope with new menaces that he said his change can be made without relinquishing freedom, and that "You can't save your liberty at bargain prices."

He hopes, he declared, that the Progressive party platform will contain a recommendation for the nationalization of money and credit in the United States. "To make the federal reserve bank a public utility and not an agency for private individuals," and he attacked again, as he has so often, the theory that "by producing less, we can have more."

"The power to create has been instituted in this country for the last 11 years. . . . The wealth man creates is the only wealth we need more of it. . . . The United States money changers' economy can't put people to work in peacetime and can't equip the country quickly when there is a threat of war. . . . The challenge must be met by action not words; we must prove to the world that a people can have security and also be free."

Lessons From Europe

The United States must take two lessons from the tragedy of Europe, LaFollette said, first that "No nation is rich enough to pay people not to produce—this leads to financial and political destruction," and second, "No nation is so poor it can't put people to work and give them a chance to produce."

"Britain," he said, "with her back up against the wall is crying for the things that only labor can produce. Yet as late as May 1, Britain still had nearly a million on the dole."

When he was in Germany a little more than a year ago, the former governor of Wisconsin related, the one piece of propaganda that was "dinned constantly into the ears of the German people" was that America, a free and rich country, had 10 million unemployed.

"It is a tragic mistake to think we can't change the United States without changing the world," he said.

Quarrels With Wife, Kills Self and His Two Young Children

Racine—(AP)—A 29-year-old mechanic, following a quarrel with his young wife, killed his two young sons and himself with carbon monoxide gas, Coroner E. B. Yanny announced last night.

He said Ben Grant, the father, was found dead in the back seat of his automobile, his arms around the lifeless bodies of his sons, Richard 3, and Donald, 5.

A hose led from the exhaust pipe into the car, Yanny said. The car was parked in the yard of the Racine Supply company, where Grant had been employed for 14 years.

A note reading, "I do not want you to hurt my children," was found attached to the windshield wiper, Yanny said.

Mrs. Grant told him, Yanny added, that she and her husband had quarreled on their way home from a tavern early Sunday morning, and that he apparently drove home and picked up the two children after she got out of the automobile.

Prison Strike Is Short-Lived

'40 or 50' Prisoners Take Part in Mess Hall Demonstration

Waupun—(AP)—Warden John C. Burke revealed Saturday night a short-lived mess hall demonstration at the Waupun state prison during which "40 or 50" prisoners refused to eat.

Burke said the men sat "quietly with their arms folded" during the noon meal Friday, but that by Friday night most had abandoned the demonstration and that by Saturday "all were again taking their meals."

The warden said the head prisoner had been sick for about two weeks and that "perhaps for one or two days the prisoners didn't get exactly what they wanted."

He disclosed that the prison food budget had been cut from "about 17 cents per day per prisoner down to about 15 cents," but added that there had been no change in the quality of food served and that none of the prisoners had complained about the size of the portions.

Informed of the incident, State Welfare Director Frank C. Klode, asserted that the prisoners were getting "the same food and better" than ever before, and that "there is no economy in food."

Governor Julius Heil, questioned at Milwaukee about economy in feeding the prisoners, said "I can't dream of that in the wildest African forest." He asserted that the prisoners could have second and third helpings "and eat until they're filled up."

Duke of Windsor Won't Stop in United States

Aboard S. S. Excalibur at sea.—(AP)—Reports that the Duke of Windsor, new governor of the Bahamas, might visit the United States en route to his post were set at rest today by announcement he would disembark from this American ship Thursday at Bermuda with his American-born duchess.

How long the Windsors will remain in Bermuda or how they will proceed to Nassau has not been decided, it was said.

Discover Wreckage Of Stolen Seaplane

Milwaukee—(AP)—Three youths sailing on Lake Michigan yesterday discovered a pontoon and part of a strut, which, police said, may be the wreckage of a seaplane stolen Friday night, from a lake front farmhouse.

Anthony Lange, operator of the seaplane, said the recovered parts would fit the stolen plane.

Makes Nomination for Navy Under-Secretary

Washington—(AP)—President Roosevelt nominated James V. Forrestal of New York, today to be under-secretary of the navy, a post created by the president under recently adopted legislation to reorganize the navy.

Hard Going For Measure Is Predicted

Washington—(AP)—The military committee voted 12 to 3 today to send to the senate floor the Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Military Training bill requiring the registration of approximately 12,000,000 men from the ages of 21 to 30, inclusive.

Committee approval cleared the way for senate consideration this week of the measure, which bore the personal endorsement of Secretary of War Stimson and was recorded by the budget bureau as being in accordance with President Roosevelt's program.

Considerable opposition to the bill was foreshadowed in the senate, despite the fact that only three votes were recorded against it in committee.

Senator Downey (D-Calif.), who was present at today's committee meeting, did not vote.

Sensors Johnson (D-Colo.), Thomas (R-Idaho), and Lundeen (FL-Minn.) voted "no." Lundeen voting by proxy.

Need Appropriation

Machinery for registrations could be set in motion if and when the bill become law, but President Roosevelt could not order any draftees into service before congress appropriated money for their training.

Army officials have said they hoped to call 400,000 men for service by October, if the bill is enacted.

The bill contained a provision permitting men from 18 to 34, inclusive, to enlist voluntarily in the army for one-year training as an alternative to conscription.

The committee acted shortly before the senate began work on a related issue—presidential authority to call the national guard into active training.

Sensors recorded in favor of the bill were Sheppard (D-Texas), Reynolds (D-N.C.), Thomas (D-Utah), Hinton (D-Ind.), Lee (D-Okla.), Hill (D-Ala.), Chandler (D-Ky.), Smathers (D-N.J.), Austin (R-Vt.), Schatz (D-Wyo.), Gurney (D-S.D.), and Holman (R-Ore.).

Later, committee attaches announced that Senator Bridges (R-N.H.), who was absent, asked to be recorded in favor of voting for the bill. Senator Slattery (D-Ill.), who was absent, was not recorded at voting.

The committee amended the measure, at the suggestion of Senator Austin, to provide that members of any army or naval reserve corps should be accorded the same treatment as conscripts in obtaining reemployment after service.

It rejected, by a seven to four vote, a proposal sponsored by the war department that divinity students be exempted from compulsory service. It also turned down, 10 to 4, on a show of hands, a proposal by Senator Johnson that Harry Woodring, former secretary of war who has opposed immediate conscription, be called to testify.

Members said the committee informally rejected a proposal by Senator Lee (D-Okla.), which had been turned down once before, that the number of conscripts who might be called under the act be limited to 400,000 in October and 400,000 next April.

The two measures were closely intertwined in the controversy over manpower which had spread over Capitol Hill during the last month.

Opponents of conscription talked of trying to amend the national guard bill to provide a system of voluntary 1-year enlistments in the army. This, they contended, would be an effective substitute for compulsory training.

Few Objections

Basically, though, few objections were voiced in advance to empower the president to order out the guard and the officers' reserve corps for a year's intensive drill.

Sensor Burke (D-Nebr.), co-author of the conscription bill, said he was confident, with administrative support evident, that it would pass the senate with no more than 20 opposing votes.

The measure would require the registration of all men from 21 to 30, inclusive. Of that group, 400,000 who were physically fit, without dependents and not holding important industrial or agricultural jobs would be ordered to active training about Oct. 1.

As a compromise Senator Maoney (D-Conn.) drafted a proposal to retain the registration feature of the Burke-Wadsworth bill but to delay operation of the selective service sections until it was demonstrated that voluntary enlistments would not fill the army's ranks.

WILLKIE CLEARS WAY FOR CONFERENCE WITH FARM GROUP—Shortly before leaving Colorado Springs, Colo., his vacation headquarters, for a conference with farm leaders at Des Moines, Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, held a meeting with party leaders to iron out details of his campaign. Will Continue Investigation

Frey Displeased With Reply Given Request To Discharge Roach

Madison—(AP)—August Frey, director of the state research bureau, declared today he would continue his investigation of the treasury department's beverage tax diversion.

Frey was displeased with the announcement by Treasurer John M. Smith that he would not comply with the bureau's recommendation for the discharge of John Roach, chief of the tax division.

The recommendation was still before Governor Heil but there was no legal way except through court action that an attempt could be made to force Roach's dismissal, Frey said he would have a statement later in the week.

The research director said he would continue to investigate until he found information that would force Roach to take back a purported statement that Frey delayed a purchase of state liquor stamps last June.

Boys Identify Milwaukee Man As One of Extortion Plot Gang

Milwaukee—(AP)—State warrants were issued today for three men arrested in connection with the bombing of a Sears Roebuck and Company store and an attempt to extort $100,000 from its manager, Rowland Davis.

Walter Minx, 23, and his brother, Kurt, 27, were charged with attempted extortion by threatening to injure and malicious destruction of property by use of explosives. The third man, Daniel Carter, 28, was charged with being an accessory after the fact on both counts.

Warrants were expected to be issued against the three prisoners today.

Detectives said the two boys identified Minx at a lineup yesterday.

One of the youths, the detectives added, said Minx gave him 25 cents to telephone Davis the night of July 26 that attempts to get in touch with him would be postponed.

The other boy said Minx had paid him 30 cents to deliver a note to a man on a motorcycle who had been detailed to attempt to make contact with the would-be extortioners. The man was policemen in plain clothes. The plotters did not keep an appointment to pick up a dummy package supposed to contain the extortion money.

Campaigns to Be Shortest in Recent History

Both Parties Will Crowd Activities Into 11-Week Drive

Washington —(P)— Three months before the November election, Democrats and Republicans are just completing their organizations for one of the shortest presidential campaigns in recent American history.

Both parties are planning to crowd into 10 or 11 weeks the oratory and doorbell ringing to which they previously devoted upwards of four months. Early indications, however, are that the contest will not be lacking in intensity although its length is curtailed.

Even as the Republicans finished the framework of their campaign set-up this weekend, their general counsel, Henry P. Fletcher, and Attorney General Jackson clashed over an interpretation of Hatch act limits to political contributions.

Fletcher made public an opinion contending that the act's $5,000 maximum on personal campaign gifts covered only contributions to a party's national committee or its senatorial or congressional committees.

"Any amounts above $5,000 that a donor desires to give should be given to state or local committees," Fletcher said, adding that these latter organizations "should be entirely divorced from the Republican National committee and should operate by authorization of the respective state committees."

Challenges Statement

The attorney general last night challenged Fletcher's statement, declaring: "The department of justice will not render advisory interpretations of the Hatch act or of other laws for political parties or others. But silence in the face of the widely published opinion of Mr. Fletcher might mislead well-intentioned persons to believe it to be an accepted interpretation of the Hatch act."

"Hence it is fair to state now that no plans of this nature for avoiding the limitations of the Hatch act are accepted or approved by the department of justice."

The Hatch act prohibits a national political organization from spending more than $3,000,000. Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee, said that "the Republican organization, the Willkie clubs and the independent Democrats who are supporting me will spend about $2,500,000."

Willkie was in Des Moines today for a conference with midwest farm leaders, but he is holding back formal campaigning until after his acceptance address Aug. 17 at Elwood, Ind.

Won't Campaign

President Roosevelt, seeking an unprecedented third term, has indicated that defense and foreign problems would keep him close to Washington much of the time. Inspection trips to various defense projects, however, may give him opportunity for speechmaking and political conferences on the side.

Much of the Democratic campaigning may fall to Secretary Henry A. Wallace, the president's running mate, but he will not begin until his acceptance speech late in August.

Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, Wallace's Republican opponent for the vice presidency, who will accept his nomination about the same time, plans only five or six major speeches. Most of them will be in the west.

Senator Glass (D-Va.), who placed James A. Farley's name in nomination at the Democratic convention, disclosed Saturday night that he would vote for Mr. Roosevelt despite his opposition to a third term.

"As a member of the nominating convention," Glass told the Washington Post, "I feel honor bound to vote for its nominee. This I propose to do."

Kepler to Serve as Resource Leader at Methodist Youth Meet

Dr. Thomas S. Kepler, professor of Bible and religion at Lawrence college, will serve as resource leader on one of the study commissions at the fourth biennial National Conference of Methodist Youth which will be held at Winona lake, Ind., August 27 to September 1.

About 1,000 Methodist young people at the conference will hear a series of addresses by noted leaders of Christian thought, and in 22 study commissions they will formulate Christian attitudes toward major issues of the day.

Three Persons Drowned in Northern Michigan

Calumet, Mich. —(P)— Three persons were drowned in Copper country waters Sunday, and the body of a fourth victim, missing for a week, was found in a dam near Calumet.

Rudolph Schutte, 32, was seized with cramps while swimming in Gratiot lake, Keweenaw county, Sunday morning and was drowned.

Walter Musolf, 37, of Marquette, was drowned bathing in Crystal lake, near Sidaun.

Frank Brandt, 35, of Hubbell, drowned early Sunday morning at the Hancock municipal bathing beach.

The body of John Stridfelt, 63, of Calumet, who disappeared from his home a week ago, was found floating in a dam near Calumet. It was believed he fell from a narrow bridge over the dam while enroute home.

He said he "never had the opportunity of governing one of the colonies" and was "sure we shall like it there."

Destroyers are Used to Beat Enemy to Punch

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York —(P)— General Pershing's recommendation that the United States make available at least 50 old World war destroyers to England probably raises the question in many minds as to just why it should be a destroyer, and not some other weapon which is suggested.

Short of a big new air force, there are few things which would be of greater assistance to Britain at this critical juncture than an additional fleet of destroyers.

The fact that they were of World war vintage wouldn't rob them of their usefulness.

The destroyer is the handy weapon of any navy, as useful as a jack-knife and invaluable both for offense and defense.

I never think of these fast watchdogs of the sea without being reminded of the mongoose, that courageous, slim-bodied, lightning-fast little animal which will tackle a cobra or any other venomous snake on sight, and generally "gets its man." I've seen these furry "destroyers" at work in India and some parts of the West Indies, and in those snake-infested sections of the world they are great protection for the homes.

So the destroyer is the protector. Its business is to get the enemy, before the latter has a chance to strike. Had it not been for destroyers in the last conflict Britain might have succumbed to the German submarine campaign of 1916-17. It was a close call as it was.

Now England not only is battling the Nazi attempt to establish a starvation blockade about the terribly invulnerable British Isles, but is faced with a possible invasion. The great defense against an invasion would be the navy, and here the destroyer would do yeoman's work.

Since one of the principal jobs of the destroyer is to overtake and destroy the fast torpedo-boat and submarine campaign of 1916-17. It was charged, it has to be very fast. Destroyers vary, but roughly they run from 1,000 to 1,500 tons and have a speed of some 35 knots.

They carry medium-caliber guns, have a number of torpedo tubes, and are equipped with depth-bomb apparatus for destruction of submarines, and many of them are especially built to enable them to ram U-boats.

Destroyers are essential auxiliaries to any battle fleet, and one of their functions is to form an anti-submarine and anti-aircraft screen for the bigger fighting ships. They are the greatest protectors of large vessels against submarine attacks.

Guarded Capitol Ships

So highly successful were destroyers in protecting the British battle fleet in the World war that no battleship or battle cruiser of the grand fleet was torpedoed by a submarine. This was despite the fact that the fleet frequently was in waters where submarines were lurking.

It was during the World war that the general utility of the destroyer was first demonstrated. Apart from the services already mentioned it was found invaluable in supporting mine-sweeping operations and in escorting convoys and shipping generally. The speed with which the destroyer can maneuver is naturally one of its great assets.

The recent operations of Nazi U-boats and torpedo speed-boats in the English channel make large numbers of destroyers of prime importance to the British. Should an invasion be attempted, the destroyers would be absolutely vital to handle the German submarines and speed-boats.

England possesses plenty of these warships, of course, but she can't have them all in home waters so long as she has to police the seas of the world, and especially the Mediterranean, which Signor Mussolini is trying to take from her.

Defeated Candidate For GOP Nomination Supports Willkie

Milwaukee —(P)— State Senator Bernhard Gettelman of Milwaukee made public today a letter he received from Thomas E. Dewey, defeated candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, in which Dewey thanked the Wisconsin delegates to the national convention for voting for him.

Dewey also urged support of Wendell Willkie, the party's presidential nominee, in his letter which read:

Chicago Labor Leader Is Dead

Michael Carrozzo, 49, Facing U. S. Charges, Dies After Operation

Chicago —(P)—Michael Carrozzo, a power in Chicago labor circles for years, is dead.

His attending physician, Dr. Herman L. Kreischer, said Carrozzo, who was 49, died early yesterday in Presbyterian hospital following an operation Thursday for the removal of gall stones.

The labor leader was under indictment for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws which grew out of charges that he and 11 co-defendants had conspired to prevent the use of ready-mixed concrete in this area.

Recently the government filed an income tax lien of $241,088 against him but he posted bond to cover this amount. The lien represented unpaid taxes, interest and penalties for 1937 and 1938.

Carrozzo was 16 years old when he arrived in this country from Italy in 1905. Eleven years later he was well on the way toward his commanding position in Chicago's labor circles. He became a naturalized citizen a few years ago.

He was listed as president of the International Union of Pavers and Road Builders, and was a major figure in the common laborers' union. Through them he maintained an influential position in 23 other labor organizations.

At one time Carrozzo was a bodyguard for "Big Jim" Colosimo, Chicago cafe proprietor, whose assassination was one of the first major killings of the prohibition era.

Carrozzo had extensive real estate holdings near Hobart, Ind., and a summer home along Lake Michigan near Michigan City, Ind.

Riding gossamer parachutes, young spiders have floated hundreds of miles.

"Let me hear from you from time to time so that we can exchange views. The immediate objective for all of us now is the election of Wendell Willkie and the entire Republican ticket next November. I think the chances are excellent and I shall do everything in my power for Republican success."

Gettelman is seeking the Republican nomination as secretary of state.

President Calls For Unity to Build Defense

Federal and State Governments Must Act Together, Group Told

Washington —(P)— President Roosevelt called today for unity between federal and state governments in strengthening national defense and uncovering subversive activities.

"And the common defense should be through the normal channels of local, state and national law enforcement," he said in a message to the federal-state conference on law enforcement problems arising from the preparedness program.

"The untrained policeman is as ineffective as the untrained soldier. The amateur detective soon becomes a fussy and malicious busybody."

"We must be vigilant, always on guard, and swift to act. But we must also be wise and co-headed, and must not express our activities in the cruel stupidities of the vigilante. There is where the fifth column forms the line."

Attorney General Jackson read the president's letter to governors, attorneys general and other state officials here for the conference. The meeting is designed to promote closer cooperation in guarding against spies, saboteurs and fifth-column activities.

A report made public in advance by J. Edgar Hoover said that the FBI investigated 16,885 defense cases during the year ended June 30, against 1,651 in the previous year and 250 in 1938. On one day in May, he said, there was a peak of 2,871 complaints.

Hoover reported "a negligible amount of sabotage (in the United States) in the second World war in contrast to the similar period in the first World war." He gave no details of cases, however.

Mr. Roosevelt called state-federal cooperation "the heart of our problem, the test of our Americanism." He added:

"There can, there must be no political considerations in our approach to these discussions. The federal government must not and will not dictate to the states what procedure they should pursue."

Some things, he said, were best handled by the federal government, such as registration of aliens and correlation under the FBI of information about subversive activities. In other cases, he continued, joint control can be effectively worked out.

"I have in mind, as an example," Mr. Roosevelt said, "the enactment by congress and the state legislatures of laws dealing with subversive activities, with seditious acts, with those things which slow up or break down our common defense program."

"These mutual objectives can be reached by carefully considered legislation, free from the prejudice and emotional haste which characterized much of similar legislation during the last World war."

Civil and Defense Costs May Be Double That of Last Year

BY IRVING PERLMETER

Washington —(P)—The budget bureau, adding up pyramiding defense outlays, found today that pending appropriations and contract authorizations may push this congress's spending total above $20,000,000,000. This figure would not only be the largest in peacetime history, but would be more than double the amount actually spent in the last fiscal year.

Statisticians found that congress already has appropriated $13,824,052,124 and has authorized contracts for an additional $1,060,487,009. These funds cover all regular governmental costs, as well as special defense items.

Main pending items are an appropriation estimate of $2,237,191,957 and a contract authorization request of $2,732,960,000, both in the latest defense bill. Altogether, completed and pending expenditure proposals total $19,920,783,090.

Extra funds to pay for extraordinary training of the national guard and for conscription would be required if congress approves those military measures. They probably would put the total over the $20,000,000,000 mark.

The revenue ledger of the government also is showing gains, although a huge deficit is taken for granted. Not even the budget bureau is able to yet guess what the deficit will be for this fiscal year. The apparent deficit is more than $13,000,000,000, but the actual one may be only about a fourth as much.

Officials explained that revenues may turn out, especially if an excess profits tax is enacted, to be much larger than anticipated, and expenditures may be much smaller than they appear.

Dr. Frederick Cook

Claim to Discovery Of North Pole Started World-Wide Argument

New Rochelle, N. Y. —(P)— Dr. Frederick A. Cook, 77-year-old explorer, whose claims to discovery of the north pole precipitated an early twentieth-century world-wide controversy, died today after a long illness.

Stricken three months ago by a cerebral hemorrhage, the aged adventurer of the arctic never fully recovered, and was taken again to the hospital 10 days ago.

Dr. Cook sprang into international prominence in September, 1909, when he announced he had discovered the north pole. Five days later Admiral Robert E. Peary claimed he had reached the top of the world first.

Cook's claim that he discovered the pole on April 24, 1908, a year before Peary reached the world's top, eventually was held to be disproved and Peary, who insisted he could find no evidence of anyone preceding him when he was there in April, 1909, was accepted as the discoverer.

Cook sank into comparative obscurity after his losing fight with Peary until 1922, when he was convicted of mail fraud and sentenced to 14 years in prison.

Broken in health, he was paroled in 1930.

Then, as he lay apparently on his death bed last May, President Roosevelt granted him a full pardon and as Cook emerged from a coma which had claimed him for days, he uttered only a feeble "thanks—happy."

War Situation Today

Enemy Badly Damaged, We're Unhurt, Is Claim of Both Sides

Europe's war of aerial blow and counter-blow sharpened today as high tides and reports of German troop concentrations kept Britain on the alert against the threat of a Nazi blitzkrieg.

Conflicting versions of the effectiveness of air raids in both sectors—Europe and Africa—concealed the results. Both Axis powers and the British claimed to have scored telling blows and to have suffered only slightly themselves.

Fourteen British planes were shot down yesterday in Africa, the Italian high command reported, while Italian fliers staged an "effective" raid on Mersa Matruh, Egypt.

Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported heavy Italian aerial assaults on British air bases in East Africa, particularly at the railroad junction towns of Haifa and Summitt in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Apparently answering an Italian report of 10 British planes shot down in one big air battle, a Royal Air Force communiqué said four British planes, engaging 50 enemy craft over Libya, bagged two and lost only one. A third Italian plane, it said, was brought down by the Italians' own anti-aircraft fire.

Countering other Italian claims: The British air force command at Cairo said also that the R. A. F. beat off Italian air raiders attempting to reach Mersa Matruh. On the other hand, it said British bombs had hit an Italian naval vessel, had fallen among a squadron of Italian submarines at Massawa, Eritrea, and had hit a fuel dump there.

Similarly, the German high command claims that British anti-aircraft positions, oil reserves and shipyards were hit and a merchant ship sunk in St. George's channel in air raids last night and early today.

It acknowledged only that British planes raiding western Germany had killed one civilian and caused "slight damage to houses."

But the British, describing far-flung R. A. F. attacks on Germany and the Nazi-held coast of the English channel, declared that three German fighters had been shot down in the attacks and admitted only that one British plane was missing. Damage from the Nazi raids on isolated midlands and eastern England districts was negligible, a British communiqué said, and casualties few.

Highest tides of the month began today and will continue through Friday, according to forecasts of a calm sea and fog on the English channel—all favorable factors for a would-be invader.

The British air ministry reported German defenses against planes were weaker and less accurate, so that the A. A. F. penetrated deep into the industrial heart of Germany as well as bombing naval structures at Kiel and synthetic plants elsewhere.

With the hours of darkness lengthening as the summer wanes, British sources said harder aerial offensives would be aimed at Germany.

The Germans told of air attack in the vicinity of Liverpool, in the west coast, Saturday night.

British-Japanese friction continued over the arrests of each other's citizens. It was disclosed that Britain intended to deport two Japanese arrested in London almost two weeks before the Japanese seized 15 Britons in Japan. Nine of the British now have been released.

Arrests in Hongkong, Singapore and Rangoon increased to nine the number of Japanese taken into custody by the British. A government statement in the house of commons on the British-Japanese situation was expected tomorrow.

Loomis, Ingram Talk At Progressive Picnic

Superior —(P)—Orlando S. Loomis, Progressive candidate for governor yesterday pledged a continuation of the fight for the Great Lakes-Lawrence seaway.

Speaking at a Progressive picnic at Pattison state park, Loomis said that while he was attorney general he sought to prevent unlawful diversion of Lake Michigan water to Chicago and had opposed shipping interests attempting to block the waterway project.

State Senator G. Erle Ingram, Progressive candidate for attorney general, also spoke at the picnic and assailed the record of the 193 legislature in which he said the farmers of Wisconsin were "sold down the river" by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats.

Ingram said the Republican promised farmers cost of production plus a fair profit but injured their markets by abolishing the Wisconsin agricultural authority.

Dr. J. P. Koehler Blasts Trade Plan for Americas

West Bend —(P)— Dr. John P. Koehler, Republican candidate to the United States senatorial nomination, declared yesterday that the proposed cartel to buy surplus South American products would make "our nation the dumping ground of all the Americas."

"There is only one decent way of helping the farmer and that is by helping him to obtain an honest price for his labor," Dr. Koehler said. "This can be done by keeping out foreign farm products, and promoting the sale of our own."

ence building is patterned after that of many eastern schools.

Extensive changes within the building include removal or relocation of several partitions and reorganization of several faculty offices and classrooms to provide more efficient classroom space. Rooms of the Town Girls association will be moved to a new location in the basement of the building, and a trustee has donated funds for furnishing the new rooms.

The entire fourth floor of the building, which originally contained dormitories, classrooms, laboratories, chapel and library, is now devoted entirely to dramatics, art and speech. Several murals have been painted on the walls by art students of the college.

Main Hall Dome Appears in New Coat of Lustrous Blue

The resplendently painted blue dome of Main hall protruding above the trees of the Lawrence college campus gives the first indication of extensive renovation activities underway in the historic building begun in 1853. Columns and exterior trim of the building have had their former gray color replaced by a gleaming white.

No one seems to be certain of the definite reason for the striking color of the dome, but John S. Mills, dean of administration, suggests that it may be another influence of eastern colleges and universities which often have domes of school buildings painted in colors. Lawrence colors are blue and white. The architectural plan of the Lawrence building is patterned after that of many eastern schools.

FREMONT HAS ITS BIG WEEKEND AS RACERS TEAR UP RIVER—The annual Fremont water carnival was staged Saturday and Sunday with another big crowd and some of the best outdoor races in the history of the event. The 2-day program got off to a wet start Saturday night but when Sunday arrived hot and clear a big crowd soon gathered and remained until late last night. Part of the crowd, which lined the bridge and the banks of the course, and some of the racers in the pits awaiting call are shown in the top picture. The picture just above shows the start of one of the races with the boats having just roared past the starter's barge. There were 15 boats in the event and they jockeyed for almost 20 minutes before they finally got away. (Post-Crescent Photos.)

Big Crowd at Fremont Hails Water Carnival

Fremont—Outboard motor speedboat races, waterbike races, surfboard riding and the Venetian night boat parade brought major applause from a crowd of more than 12,000 persons at the 13th annual Fremont Water carnival on the Wolf River Saturday and Sunday.

Featured events of the carnival were the outboard motor speedboat races sanctioned by the National Outboard Association and run under the direction of the Wisconsin Boating association. George Kuehn, Milwaukee pilot, proved the star of the meet, winning three races and placing in two others.

Climax of the carnival was the Venetian night boat parade Sunday evening in which over 30 illuminated floats ablaze with flares and lights paraded before the bleachers and river banks crowded with thousands of spectators beneath a dazzling display of fireworks.

New events on both Saturday and Sunday afternoon programs were waterbike races, said to be the first in this country. Participants pedaled over a 100-yard course, with a turn around the abutments under the Fremont bridge.

Bands Perform
Bands of Weyauwega High school and of the Sons of Veterans of Foreign Wars of Wausau played throughout the Sunday program. Another feature of the carnival was the "Adopted Son of Neuplume" performed by Julius Prellwitz, Fremont, plowing along the Wolf river in a pair of wooden shoes.

While Saturday night's program was dampened by a steady rain, Sunday's events were completed under sunny skies for the thirteenth successive year.

Results of Sunday's races were as follows:

Pegler Offers a Campaign Suggestion as Gift to Wilkie

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—I don't know why I am always giving away, free, the marvelous thoughts which grow in such profusion in my wonderful brain, but suppose we just put it down to my generous Italian nature and proceed to this day's love-gift which is offered to Mr. Wendell Wilkie, a man I have met but once—and that time only barely.

In view of the insinuations which have been tossed around concerning Mr. Wilkie's service on the side of wealth and the suggestion that he must, therefore, himself be a money lover. I propose that right now Mr. Wilkie draw up a schedule of every dollar's worth of property and every cent of money that he owns, down to the rustiest curly-handled masher in his golf bag and the change in his pants and require every member of his family to do the same, and file these documents in some public record or tack them on the courthouse door of his old home town.

I propose that he promise that if he is elected he will require every member of his cabinet to do the same and that he state publicly that he and every member of his family over whom he has any control and the cabinet members and their families will not exploit public office, directly or indirectly, for private profit beyond the salaries provided by law.

Not being a lawyer, I will skip the and/or's and the legalistic bullet-proofing and concentrate on the intent of this proposal, which is that Mr. Wilkie should throw everything on the blanket for a public counting before election and guarantee to do the same again at the end of his term, if any, and promise that he will not quit office with a dollar more than he had when he went in, except such amounts as he can prove to have been saved out of his salary.

No writing for magazines or syndicates, for high prices by relatives as yet untouched by literary genius, no sales endorsements or radio performances for pay, no insurance business between members of his family and interests which are subject to whimsical interpretations of laws or codes by government bureaus and no hundred-thousand-dollar mock jobs for any cousins or aunts with any liquor, movie or shipping interests, under penalty of public repudiation of such cousins or aunts which would destroy the only possible motive for their employment in such jobs.

Should Be Statement Of General Principle

Mr. Wilkie, being a lawyer, can dress up this idea so that it can stand inspection and expand it to include other members of the national administration, even to the degree of precluding the employment of ne'er-do-well brothers-in-law of important officials in $4,800-$8,000 jobs counting paper clips or keeping scrapbooks. He should cover it with a statement of the general principle that public officials have a moral obligation not to enrich themselves on the side or permit relatives over whom they have control to exploit their relationship for profit.

To be sure, this would be in the nature of a dig at the Roosevelt family, but after all, they have been asking for it—except young Franklin and Johnny—but it would also honor a noble note addressed to such public servants as Ed Kelly and Frank Hague and, in a wider sense, to the morals of all the people.

The insinuations that because Wilkie has served big corporations he probably will peel the gilt off the capitol dome and carry off a trunk-load of samples from the thousand-dollar-bill department of the treasury, give him an excellent invitation to declare himself on the subject of private gain and the exploitation of office by the relatives of public men and a fine opportunity.

Library Board Will Elect New Officers

New officers of the Appleton Library board will be elected in a business meeting at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the library, according to Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, librarian. J. R. Joyce now is president and Dr. D. M. Gallaher is secretary.

Holy Name Parish Picnic Nets $1,500

Kimberly—The Holy Name parish picnic on July 28 cleared $1,533.82 after $652.38 were paid for expenses, Rev. C. B. Vanden Borne, pastor, announced Sunday.

Bazaar books netted the largest amount, $504.60; other profits included donations, $207; malt beverage stand, $444; ice cream and candy stand, $225; lunch stand, $181; fish pond $48.75; cane rack, $36. The picnic game brought in $269.85.

The anti-air craft search light which was shown in Appleton Saturday evening portrayed reflections of its beams in four corners of the village. A large number of villagers watched the swaying of the strong light through the skies.

Cut Red Tape To Rush Plans For Swim Pool

Representatives of Hunter Firm in City To Hear Suggestions

A E. Wendt and Paul Schroeder, representatives of the Hunter Swimming Pools, Inc., were in Appleton this afternoon to confer with the board of public works on plans for the pool to be built at Erb park.

The men brought with them the plans for the 150-foot saucer-shaped pool so that the board may study them and make suggestions for changes necessary in this climate. The revised plans are expected to be ready for approval at Wednesday night's council meeting.

The council voted to build the pool submitted by the Hunter firm last Wednesday and since then officials have done everything possible to cut "red tape" and get construction started before September.

City Attorney Harry P. Hoeffel is studying the contract for revising so that if the construction contract is more than 10 per cent above the estimated $48,708 set up by the Hunter firm, the city may reject all bids.

Mayor John Goodland, Jr., said today that if changes in the plans are ready by Wednesday, the council can advertise for bids immediately and contracts for construction of the pool could be let by late August, giving the contractor September and October to complete the pool so that it will be ready by next spring.

Two Fined for Tippy Driving

Reinard Buck, Vilas Price Plead Guilty in Waupaca Court

Waupaca—Reinard Buck, 27, town of Dupont, pleaded guilty of drunk driving when he was arraigned before Justice S. W. Johnson Friday. He was fined $50 and costs.

Vilas Price, 28, town of Pella, Shawano county, pleaded guilty to a similar charge and was fined $25 and costs when he appeared before Justice Johnson last Thursday. Both men were arrested by Traffic Officer Earl Polzin.

Costs are $10 in State Code Case

William C. Chernoff, operator of the DeLuxe Beauty Salon, was assessed $10 as costs when he appeared before Circuit Judge Joseph R. McCarthy Saturday in a contempt action arising out of a controversy over state code regulations.

Chernoff was charged a few weeks ago with violation of the state code and Judge McCarthy issued a restraining order against infringement of code rules pending disposition of the case. Upon the filing of an affidavit of prejudice Chernoff was ordered to appear before Circuit Judge Arnold Murphy at Marinette, Aug. 12.

Saturday, however, the beauty salon operator was charged with violation of Judge McCarthy's restraining order, was adjudged in contempt of court and ordered committed until he agreed to comply with the order. He agreed immediately and was released upon assessment of $10 costs.

There were no injuries.

Three people were injured in an accident at 11 o'clock Saturday night three miles south of Kaukauna on Highway 55. Joseph F. Birkmeier, 313 E. Seventh street, Kaukauna, was the driver of one of the two machines that sideswiped on a curve, according to the Calumet county sheriff's department. Birkmeier was unhurt, but Joe Paulich, Kaukauna, riding with him, received a severe cut on the face.

Two occupants of the other machine, Mrs. Joseph Schwablander and Robert Schwablander, route 2, Hilbert, were injured. Mrs. Schwablander received face lacerations and Robert head injuries.

Milk Pool Started Here Eight Years Ago Seeks to Dissolve

The Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool, which had its origin in Outagamie county about eight years ago when a group of farmers decided something had to be done about falling milk prices, apparently is on the way to dissolution. Last Saturday Harry H. Jack, Hortonville, president of the Pool, announced that steps toward liquidation of the organization will be taken in Brown county circuit court this week.

Membership in the pool has dwindled from a top of about 6,000 to a present 2,800, due, Mr. Jack says, to farmers and member cheese factories "submitting to monopolistic bait" extended by competitors of the pool.

"As a result of the continual attack on the morale of patrons of our organization, we found factory after factory submitting to the monopolistic bait extended to them and leaving this organization," Mr. Jack said.

"This continued to the point where it was felt that rather than leave a small group to bear the burdens contracted for by a considerably larger group, the only fair thing to do was liquidate and have each factory and patron treated equally, in proportion to their patronage."

May Reorganize

While the receivership proceedings are pending, Jack said, a committee of three will contact the left arm and Mrs. Baake was bruised when their car collided head-on with one driven by Louis Jarosinski, 23, route 3, Pulaski, at 12:15 Sunday morning. The crash occurred on County Trunk C five miles north of Seymour, according to county highway police. Baake was treated at a Green Bay hospital.

Frank Stuyvenberg, 28, Kimberly, had his left arm cut when a car he was driving sideswiped a machine driven by Ervin Swamp, 21, 326 S. Walter avenue, Appleton, last night on County Trunk N near Darby. Both cars were badly damaged.

Ten persons lost their lives in Wisconsin accidents during the weekend, according to the Associated Press.

The dead:

Edward Puent, about 15, La Crosse.

James Roeske, 25, Milwaukee.

Charles Burke, 12, Kenosha.

Bert Merritt, 63, Pittsfield.

E. W. Reynolds, 54, Long Beach, Calif.

Claude Webb, 50, Chicago.

Ralph Averill, 32, West Bend.

Edwin Paige, 28, Oshkosh.

William Rhinehart, about 30, Milton Junction, Wis.

The Puent boy, who was spending the summer at Oakdale, drowned in the Mauston municipal swimming pool Sunday night.

Authorities said he and his brother, Robert, 17, had climbed over a fence after the pool had closed for the night.

The Burke boy drowned when he fell off a log late Sunday as he was riding it down turbulent Pike creek where it empties into Lake Michigan in Kenosha.

Reynolds and Webb were killed near Madison Sunday when the cars in which they were riding collided head-on on Highway 51, north of the city. Three others were injured.

Rhinehart was killed near Janesville Sunday when an automobile, driven by a friend, overturned.

Averill was killed near West Bend Saturday night, his car overturning as he attempted to pass another automobile.

Paige, an Oshkosh electrician, lost his life while attempting to repair an amusement device in a carnival at Mayville Saturday night. He was standing on water wet after a rain when he touched a piece of metal that had been short circuited.

Boos was injured fatally Saturday night when struck by an automobile in Milwaukee.

Merritt was killed Saturday night near Pittsfield when he was struck by a motorcycle while walking along the highway near his home.

of Wisconsin, but the Fox river valley was the center of the disturbance. On May 17 a detachment of 150 national guards broke up a parade of farmers east of the Shawano city limits, and the next day a pitched battle with clubs and gas was fought on the west city limits of Appleton by a squad of sheriff's deputies and national guard troops with a large group of farmers that had driven through the city. There was no disturbance of any kind as the farmers filed through town, and everything was peaceful until the caarvan was passing out of the city.

Just what caused the disturbance at the very end of the demonstration has never been determined, but in a twinkling clubs were flying and the air was filled with gas hurled by deputies. There were a few minor casualties and a few arrests.

The strike was called off shortly after this, and the Pool began a systematic program of marketing milk which has persisted to this time. For a while the state office was in Oshkosh, but later it was moved to Green Bay.

Willkie Leads Roosevelt in Electoral Votes, 304-227, as Battle Starts

South Is Still Solid for FDR, Survey Shows

Princeton, N. J.—The first state-by-state Roosevelt-Willkie survey of the American Institute of Public Opinion—conducted in the fortnight since the Democratic convention at Chicago—shows the two great parties almost evenly matched at the beginning of the campaign.

Wendell L. Willkie, who was nominated by the Republican party on June 20, has taken a slight lead over President Roosevelt in Institute figures at the present time, returns from the 48 states show. If the election were today, the indications from this first survey are that Willkie would carry 24 of the 48 states—virtually all of them lying north of the Ohio river—with a total of 304 of the 531 votes in the electoral college, or 38 more than the 266 electoral votes which are necessary to win.

But while Willkie is leading in electoral votes today, President Roosevelt still holds a narrow majority of the popular vote in the Institute survey. Such a paradoxical situation is possible, of course, because of the tremendous pluralities rolled up for President Roosevelt in many southern states—far more than is necessary to assure him their electoral votes.

Returns from Wisconsin show Willkie leading by a vote of 51 to 49 per cent.

The Institute's question—put to a carefully selected cross-section of the voters in each of the 48 states—asked: "If the Presidential election were being held today, would you vote for the Republican candidate, Wendell Willkie, or the Democratic candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt?"

The replies of those with definite choices at the present time show a two-party division in the popular vote throughout the United States as follows:

Roosevelt 51%
Willkie 49%

Where the two candidates will stand next November—or even a month from now—depends on a multitude of factors, it is still three months until election day, and the country has yet to hear the pros and cons of campaign argument. Much may depend on the course of events abroad. And finally, the survey shows that about one voter in eight (13%) has made no definite choice between Roosevelt and Willkie as yet.

Four salient facts about U. S. political sentiment, as of today, are indicated by the survey, however:

1. The Republican party, with Wendell Willkie and Senator McNary, is in the lead today in 24 states, as compared with the two states the GOP carried in 1936. Republican gains have ranged from 1 percentage point in South Carolina—most Democratic state in the Union—to 22 points in Oregon, home state of Senator McNary. Whereas President Roosevelt received 62½ per cent of the major party vote in the 1936 election, returns from the Institute survey give the president only 51 per cent—or a decline of 11½ points.

2. Plotted on a map of the United States, Republican territory now extends in a virtually solid band from New England to the Pacific northwest. Despite the nomination of Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace of Iowa as the Democratic candidate for vice president, the Institute survey shows the GOP leading in every one of the Middle Western farm states except Missouri.

3. Nevertheless, President Roosevelt is still well out in front in the entire "Solid South, and this despite the reported disaffection of some Southern Democrats over the third term. Wendell Willkie has announced that he will campaign in the traditionally Democratic South in an effort to win one or more states, but in the Institute survey thus far the 13 southern states average 72 to 28 for Roosevelt.

4. And finally, the Republican lead in several states—namely Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wyoming, Connecticut and Rhode Island—is so slim that a shift of slightly more than 1 per cent in these states would tip a majority of electoral votes to the New Deal.

Landon Also Led FDR Early in '36

As Wendell Willkie prepares for his acceptance speech at Elwood, Ind., later this month, the big question facing the Republicans is whether they can hold their first-lap advantage over the Democrats, or whether President Roosevelt and Henry Wallace will cut into their narrow lead.

Institute surveys conducted state-by-state immediately after the party conventions in 1936 showed that Landon took an early lead over Roosevelt (in electoral votes) in the first month of the campaign, only to fall behind in September. The first ceed 4 per cent. Actually, in 11 election predictions made by the Institute since 1936, the error from all causes (cross-section error as well as error due to size of sample) has averaged only 3.1 per cent. In interpreting the above percentages for any particular state, these limitations should be borne in mind.

Institute survey in that campaign, published July 12, 1936, found Landon ahead in 21 states with a total of 272 electoral votes. The state-by-state picture was much the same as it is today.

Further reports at regular intervals by the American Institute of Public Opinion will chart the trend of the present campaign and indicate where the greatest "danger spots" are for both parties in which age and income groups the candidates have their greatest support, and how the public reacts to the issues raised during the campaign.

It must be emphasized that the course of political sentiment in the next few months may be strongly influenced by events abroad. In the past, President Roosevelt's popularity has risen with the intensifying of Europe's crises. This was dramatically revealed this spring when Democratic party strength rose from 54 per cent to 58 per cent between mid-April and mid-June, while Adolf Hitler was carrying the blitzkrieg into Holland, Belgium and France. The current gains of the Republicans coincide with a relative slackening of the European conflict, as well as with the nomination of Willkie.

The reader should bear in mind, furthermore, that some margin of error is involved in every sampling operation, no matter how carefully conducted, due to the size of the sample itself. In the present survey the statistical probabilities are approximately 95 in 100 that the average error per state resulting from the size of the sample will not exceed 4 per cent.

Actually, in 11 state, national and local election surveys in which the Institute has made forecasts since 1936, the error from all causes (cross-section error as well as error due to the size of sample) has averaged only 3.1 per cent.

Disputes Lead To Survey of Lake Islands

State Lays Claim to 'Forgotten' Parcels Of Valuable Land

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Disputes with private land-owners over claims of ownership to some of the more than 600 small islands scattered through northern Wisconsin lakes has brought about an order from the conservation commission calling for a complete survey of these valuable but "forgotten" parcels, it was learned today.

By virtue of a special congressional enactment, the state conservation department lays claim on behalf of the state of Wisconsin to hundreds of small pieces of land, ranging in size from less than an acre to more than a dozen acres, lying in the lakes in the northern part of the state. The act gives the state title, according to the department, to all uncharted islands north of a line extending east and west across the state in the vicinity of Stevens Point.

However, in recent years various private landowners on adjacent shore lines have claimed title, and in various court cases have had their claims sustained.

Lease Islands
The state formerly leased many of the islands to private citizens for hunting and fishing lodges, and for summer homes, but recent state legislation has ended such leases, and except for agreements made earlier and not yet expired, the islands are now dedicated to public recreational uses.

According to C. L. Harrington, superintendent of forests and parks in the state conservation department, the department intends to allow the small tracts to remain in their natural state as attractive sites for tourists and vacationers. In some instances they represent the only public lands in the vicinity of popular lakes, all of the shore lines being held by private owners, he explained.

The conservation commission recently discussed selling some of the islands which have been leased to tenants who have made extensive improvements on their property, and who are forestalled by legislation from renewing their leases.

Presidents James Monroe and John Tyler both were buried at Richmond, Va.

Draft Becomes Political Football, Johnson Writes

Editor's note: The daily column by General Hugh S. Johnson is being substituted for Raymond Clapper's column while Mr. Clapper is on vacation.

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington—Without apology, this column is becoming again a harp with one string—selective military service—or to put it more bluntly, conscription.

There are three reasons for this. It is the most vital immediate question before congress and the country. I happen to know more about this subject than any other. It is despicably being made a political football. So here goes another twang of the Jew's-harp.

Except for the president and lame duck Senator Burke, no leading Democrat has come out plainly for the principle of selective service. On the contrary, get a load of this from Democratic Senator Burt Wheeler to Candidate Willkie: "It is stated that some of the leading financial institutions in New York supporting your candidacy will refuse to support you if you oppose this legislation. This would be a good time to let the people know on which side you are going to stand."

The senator added that the sentiment of the people as expressed through farm organizations, church groups, labor unions, peace groups and organized and unorganized youth is overwhelmingly against the Burke-Wadsworth bill, that only eastern metropolitan newspapers are supporting it and that the president is in accord with the principles of the bill.

There is nothing but pure politics in that blurb from Burt—nothing about the merits of necessity for selective service—a great and vital question of American security—only a taunt about political pressure groups, a demagogue's dig about eastern influence and financial interests "supporting" Willkie and a clever confusion of terms between the principle of selective service and this particular (Burke-Wadsworth) bill.

That bill was badly drawn with little study of our past experience and little knowledge of the subject. It was badly presented without sufficient warning to the public or effort to inform it. The president wisely hasn't committed himself to its terms and Mr. Willkie would be foolish to do so. But the president has endorsed the principle. If Mr. Willkie did that also, it would leave the senator's political trick all dressed with no place to go.

Men Needed to Run
Weapons Bought by Congress
The antics, posturing and political monkey-business in the senate on this subject make one wonder whether Hitler is right about the unfitness of the democracies to defend themselves. Amendments to change the title of the bill to disguise its purpose, to limit the size of the draft, to exempt whole classes by legislative fiat—these things are attempts to discredit the principle, disgust the public and emasculate this legislation.

Congress, acting under public pressure, certainly didn't appropriate billions for armament for defense on any idea that the people were fools enough to think that weapons could defend America without men to wield them. As a

Shirley Temple and Panama

Some 81 aliens have been discharged from jobs in the Panama Canal Zone with the purpose of protecting that important American waterway from sabotage.

Approval of strict rules designed to insure the protection of vital property anywhere follows almost as a matter of course.

And yet to many Americans this belated action will call up visions it is well to look at closely. This hectic scurry to safety, with all the imperfections that arise from haste and that wouldn't have followed deliberate action could have been avoided by the use of a small amount of "gray matter."

Probably the vision need only reach back about two years. The on-looker will see the Dies committee trying to show the nation rodents gnawing at the foundations, Reds and Bundists planning destruction at orders from Moscow and Berlin.

The Dies Committee was actuated by clean and patriotic purpose and directed by men smart enough to detect the acrid odor of smoke when it was inflaming their throat. But it took prodigious efforts to even get the necessary funds from a spending-mad administration in order to protect this priceless nation from the destroyers.

Have we so soon forgotten the incident of Shirley Temple? Shall we turn back and read the speeches of Secretary Ickes and Secretary Perkins who scoffed at the evidence and then twisted it into unrecognizable shape in order to ridicule the committee before the country? Shall we turn away from the picture of Lady Roosevelt inviting radicals to the White House in order to affront the Committee and the President himself trying to get party leaders to squelch further hearings?

Because of the false color which the Roosevelt administration put upon the early testimony before the Dies committee and its obvious intention of making the committee hateful in the eyes of the public the Post-Crescent sent to Washington for a stenographic report of the actual testimony. It found that former Reds testified that they attempted to associate popular names with all their movements with the thought that they would thus gain safety and respectability. Among these names was that of the sweet little lady called Shirley Temple. Members of the Roosevelt administration, by interview and broadcast, declared that the committee was trying to prove that Shirley Temple was a communist and laughed loud and raucously at the threat of danger to the country from the child star.

But the people were not to be fooled. They saw very clearly what was going on. Congress heard from them. And the Dies committee received its life preserving appropriation. It continued its perfectly non-partisan efforts to expose vicious plots against America, whether proceeding from Fascists or Communists, and before the two were demonstrated to be the ugly and chummy twins they are.

As the danger of American participation in war increases, as our great industries bend to the task of defense, which is nowhere underway as yet, as the explosions set by Fifth Columnists shatter the eardrums and the chemical-fires that cannot be put out reddens the skies, let us make the proper deductions.

For the administration, and its cabinet members who were trucking to New York and New Jersey radicals, seriously impaired America's protection of its vital rights.

And if thanks are due to anyone for minimizing the destructiveness of the vicious Fifth Column it won't be the administration that today sits at Washington.

This Matter of Justice

Ex-Governor Long has been indicted by a grand jury in Louisiana. He is accused of embezzlement of public moneys.

The precise charge is that during the crucial year prior to the primary in which he was defeated the public payroll was brazenly padded with his political workers so that the people might be given the privilege of paying for his campaign.

This is a wretched accusation. It is a deplorable sort of trickery. And correctly the law calls it embezzlement, which is the diversion of funds to one's own purposes that were entrusted to a person for another purpose.

But every person who reflects upon the strange way of justice is likely to shake his head when some are arrested and some go free.

If proof is forthcoming that Louisiana's ex-Governor padded the payrolls conviction should follow. And yet we could name the supreme padder of payrolls in all history who secured an election "on my word of honor" that he would not add to the public payroll, but actually added over 390,000 at a cost to his government of nearly a billion and a half dollars a year, and he has not been indicted by any grand jury.

Nor should he be. He has not actually committed an offense against the laws of his country.

But Justice walks strange roads.

Planting a Hatred Seed in America

The Balbo Cooperative Colony has started functioning in Illinois. Its purpose is to build a community of Italian people. It says nothing about any intention to trip the steady march of the American people toward better things. But its creator may well be made the subject of suspicion. This project is a twin for that started a few months ago by a German alien named Hass who flattened out and fled after the press revealed that instead of being the "big money man," backed by millions of dollars," as he described himself, he had come out of two years residence in the smelliest slum flophouse in Chicago.

The purpose of these colonies is generally mischievous. They seek to preserve an alien atmosphere. They are not content with singing old country songs, dressing in native costume or retelling the stories of boyhood under alien skies, rights that are freely conceded to everyone in America, but they aim at creating a feeling of hostility between themselves and the general run of people in this country. They would, if permitted to flourish, create the same hatefulness that exists today in Transylvania where two million Rumanians gleam sourly at the two million Hungarians and both are suspicious of the million Germans.

The press plays an important and valuable part in revealing these plans to the public and in preventing people joining such projects who must be interested before they can be successful. And in this country the finest deterrent and successful obstruction to creating Italian, German, Irish or other colonies has been the people themselves who will not give their consent to forming these running sores in our body politic.

No one takes offense in America at those of one blood living closely together. That is natural. Men of common antecedents find more interest in each other and more subjects to discuss than other men. But American history has revealed with unerring clearness that gradually these natural barriers crumble without compulsion.

The Italian girl finds a Bohemian husband and the little Dutch maiden marries a Scot. The most beautiful weapon that America has in remaining American is the conviction of most of our immigrants that they will be treated justly and honestly, equally with everyone else, and that they need create no little national cell to act as a unit either to protect themselves or mistreat others.

But miserable as would be the result were we to allow our country to develop as the continent of Europe has developed the fact still remains that most of these colonies are high pressure plots to make a good deal of money by beating on the drum of nationalism and deluding in the name of old country recollections.

The Independent Voter

Mr. Willkie recently said that "for 25 years men prided themselves on their partisanship; now they pride themselves on their independence." He added that the number of independent voters has risen sharply until "at least half the voters cross party lines rather rapidly." Independent voting has been, we believe, a great influence for good in this country. When both political parties were made to realize that there was nothing certain about their success because of the independent voters it tended to keep arrogance out of their attitudes and helped substitute reason for passion.

But like many other good things independent voting may react detrimentally by so entangling organization that a political party may be almost picked up and directed by some gay but bold political musketeers whose purpose is to ride it hard for a short time for all there is in it. Sight must not be lost of the fact that party organizations must be maintained. To this end it is essential that we have some party discipline. Leaders who stick to their parties through thick and thin, even if they are not always satisfied, serve a good purpose in preventing the party from flattening out entirely.

There are two kinds of professional politicians. One is an unpleasant spectacle. The other is a worthy sentinel. The man who equips himself for a political career and follows the steady star of service is a valuable asset to the country. If we could keep that kind, instead of the mere self-seeking politician who will go with any crowd in any direction for what there is in it, political parties could maintain much more consistent courses, surely a desirable end.

As has been many times stressed in this column, and as no voter should permit himself to forget, a political party is just as good and just as bad as the men who run it. It would make a rumble in that stately mausoleum at Springfield, Illinois, to compare the Republican party of Lincoln with that of Harry Daugherty. And what has the present-day Democratic party retained of Jefferson and Jackson except their bones, which are rattled annually to cheer up those who live upon past greatness?

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—The British have done an excellent job of rooting out fifth column elements and preventing a repetition of what happened in Norway and the Lowlands. But how hard this is to do was indicated by an uncensored report just received here that as early as July 1 German parachute troops were being landed.

Four were nabbed that day in north Wales. They were not ordinary soldiers. Attired as hikers, they spoke perfect English, carried genuine English registration cards, which could have come only from British sources, and apparently had specific instructions whom to contact.

One of the spies, before being apprehended, telephoned a man who later was discovered to be a fifth columnist. The purpose of the parachutists was to get in touch with individuals in England who would furnish them with information and help to undermine resistance against invasion.

It was also learned from the capture of these men that fifth columnist fishermen in the region were servicing a Nazi submarine.

MILITARY TRAINING

The army is up against a much tougher task than most people realize in getting ready for compulsory military training or for the special call of the national guard.

The main problem is housing such a large number of men. To do this takes time. It takes time to construct barracks, to put in sewerage, to bring in water supplies. As much as possible of this work must be done before bad weather sets in.

This is why the war department is so impatient over the delay in congress. If the legislation finally passes, then the army can begin letting contracts. But until then not one order can be placed for barracks or anything else.

All the plans are ready on paper, and the army has scarcely overlooked a detail in these advance preparations. But that is as far as it can go.

Another handicap is the fact that the national guard this month is conducting its most important maneuvers in history. And if congress grants Roosevelt's request to permit him to call out the guard for a year's training, it will be necessary to send the men back to their homes to arrange their private affairs, then send them back into the field.

This doubles the cost of transportation. If congress had acted earlier it might have been avoided.

WHO'S KIDDING WHOM?

Genial, barren-beaned Senator Burke, anti-New Deal Nebraska Democrat, is an enthusiastic jester, but the big question among his colleagues is: Just who is Burke kidding regarding his plan to stage public hearings on the third term issue.

Burke has set the hearings for August 12. The excuse is to hear arguments on his constitutional amendment to limit presidential terms to one six-year period. But the private records of the senate judiciary committee, of which Burke is a member, disclose that he has no authority to hold such proceedings. Here is the inside story of his mysterious move.

It was way back in January, 1939, that Burke introduced the proposal. A few days later he was made chairman of a sub-committee to consider an anti-third term bill and report on it to the full committee.

The subcommittee made a report in July, 1939—just one year ago—recommending that the measure be sent to the senate without recommendation; that is, the sub-committee ducked taking any stand. In keeping with long practice in cases like this, the full committee thereupon shelved the bill and forgot all about it.

As far as this congress is concerned, the bill is as dead as a dried mackerel. There isn't the remotest chance of its being considered.

Burke knows this, just as he knows that his sub-committee no longer has any jurisdiction over the bill. It relinquished jurisdiction when it reported to the full committee more than a year ago. Adding a dash of piquancy is the fact that Burke himself is just as much a lame duck as his bill, having been defeated for re-nomination several months ago.

All of which adds up to the following: A lame duck senator proposes to use a dead bill over which he no longer has any jurisdiction to stage a series of hearings at public expense to boost a political candidate.

Meanwhile Democratic senators are betting that the trick won't come off. Burke isn't that good.

ARGENTINE ISOLATION

The difficulties with Argentina which arose in Havana may come up again, so it might be well to look at some of the things that have happened backstage in Pan-American diplomacy.

Strange as it may seem, the great majority of the Argentine people are strong routers for the U.S.A. This change in public sentiment has taken place chiefly since the New Deal, and because of Roosevelt's Good Neighbor policy. It is no exaggeration to say that Roosevelt's liberal reforms are watched with the closest interest in Argentina, and that he is more popular than most Argentine leaders.

This is true of about 75 per cent of the people. The remaining 25 per cent, which includes the ruling aristocracy and the big ranch owners, are vigorously anti-Roosevelt. One notable exception, however, is President Ortiz, who before the Havana conference opened, was stricken with diabetes, and is not expected to recover. For the time being he has now resigned.

Argentine foreign policy, therefore, is dictated solely by Foreign Minister Jose Castillo, an old school, pip-squeak diplomat, trained in Europe, who vigorously dislikes the United States. Behind him are some of the big Buenos Aires banks which favor direct dealing with Hitler.

When the Argentine delegation left for Havana, it carried definite instructions to oppose the United States and follow an isolationist policy. But during the conference, that isolationism was modified. The man responsible for that modification was Dr. Leopoldo Melo, chief Argentine delegate.

He took it on his own shoulders partially to ignore instructions from Foreign Minister Castillo and adopt a much more cooperative policy. He could not throw Argentine isolation overboard entirely, but he went much further than his instructions permitted. In doing this he had behind him the Argentine people, though not Foreign Minister Castillo.

Note—Dr. Melo belongs to the Radical Party, which is more liberal than the government in power. Despite this, it might be wise to keep an eye on him. He may be slated for bigger things.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—Out of almost every major event that occurs in or affects Washington comes a plethora of stories. Some are fantastic, some are trial balloons released by the powers-that-be to test public reactions, and some are merely ridiculous. Still others are a clear-minded analysis of a situation.

I try to pass along only those that have some basis in reason, interest or logic. Occasionally I run across one I can not tab, but which seems worth passing along. Of such is the following. It is interesting and reasonable, but whether it is somebody's pipe dream or has its roots in truth I haven't the slightest idea.

It is that President Roosevelt if he is re-elected, has no intention of serving out a third term.

Some People Say—

This story, which has been kicked around for some time, is causing many an argument over coffee and crumpets.

Those who contend for it argue this way: The President was absolutely sincere in his statement that he did not wish to run again. Months ago he told not only intimates but Republican Col. Frank Knox, who now is in his cabinet, that he doubted if he could stand the strain of another four years in the White House.

Starting with the court fight, the attempted party purges of 1938, the neutrality act, and the thousands of problems arising out of the war in Europe and the new defense measures, these persons say, the president has been through a lot at the tail end of his second term, not to mention the battles of the first. Look at what is ahead in the next few months. Is it any wonder he is tired and feels the need of rest and retirement?

And one thing more, they argue: Why did Roosevelt select Henry A. Wallace as his 1940 running mate? Admitted that Wallace, as Secretary of Agriculture and head of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, controls personnel and funds that affect millions of voters, wouldn't F. D. R., as the prime force behind all, have received all of those votes anyway? It doesn't detract from Wallace's ability as an economist, farm specialist and administrator to admit that he is no great shakes as a political campaigner, when one seemed desperately needed on the ticket this year. Then, why Wallace? Because, more than any other vice presidential possibility, he could be depended upon to carry on, without disruption, the New Deal reforms and New Deal ideologies.

No Use Asking

Therefore, the upholders of this theory conclude, when the world crisis is over, when the ship is again on even keel, Roosevelt, if he is elected, will relinquish the helm and take the long rest he so much needs.

But it wouldn't do any good to ask him. Just as announcement of his third term plans possibly would have weakened his position both in the capitol and abroad, so would any such hint from him weaken the power and strength of the Presidency when the country needs it most.

Well, that's the story anyway.

COMPULSORY TRAINING

Editor Post-Crescent—About this compulsory military service—the other day I overheard one of our local matrons uttering this ridiculous remark, "I don't know why my Junior should go to a training camp and sacrifice a year of his life. It seems a shame, what with him just getting a job and starting to settle down, and you know how they turn out after they leave there." Those were the words of one misinformed mother and they are being repeated by hundreds of others daily.

It seems a shame that a movement as clean and splendid as compulsory training should be so misconstrued and twisted about that mothers shudder at the mere mention of it.

Why don't some of these women who so virtuously object to compulsory training investigate the movement thoroughly? In seeking to protect their sons they are denying them a year of the finest, cleanest living yet devised by man. The regular hours, hard work, high ideals and rigid discipline can hurt no one. Yet the state is accused of seeking to sacrifice a year of Junior's life—poor Junior.

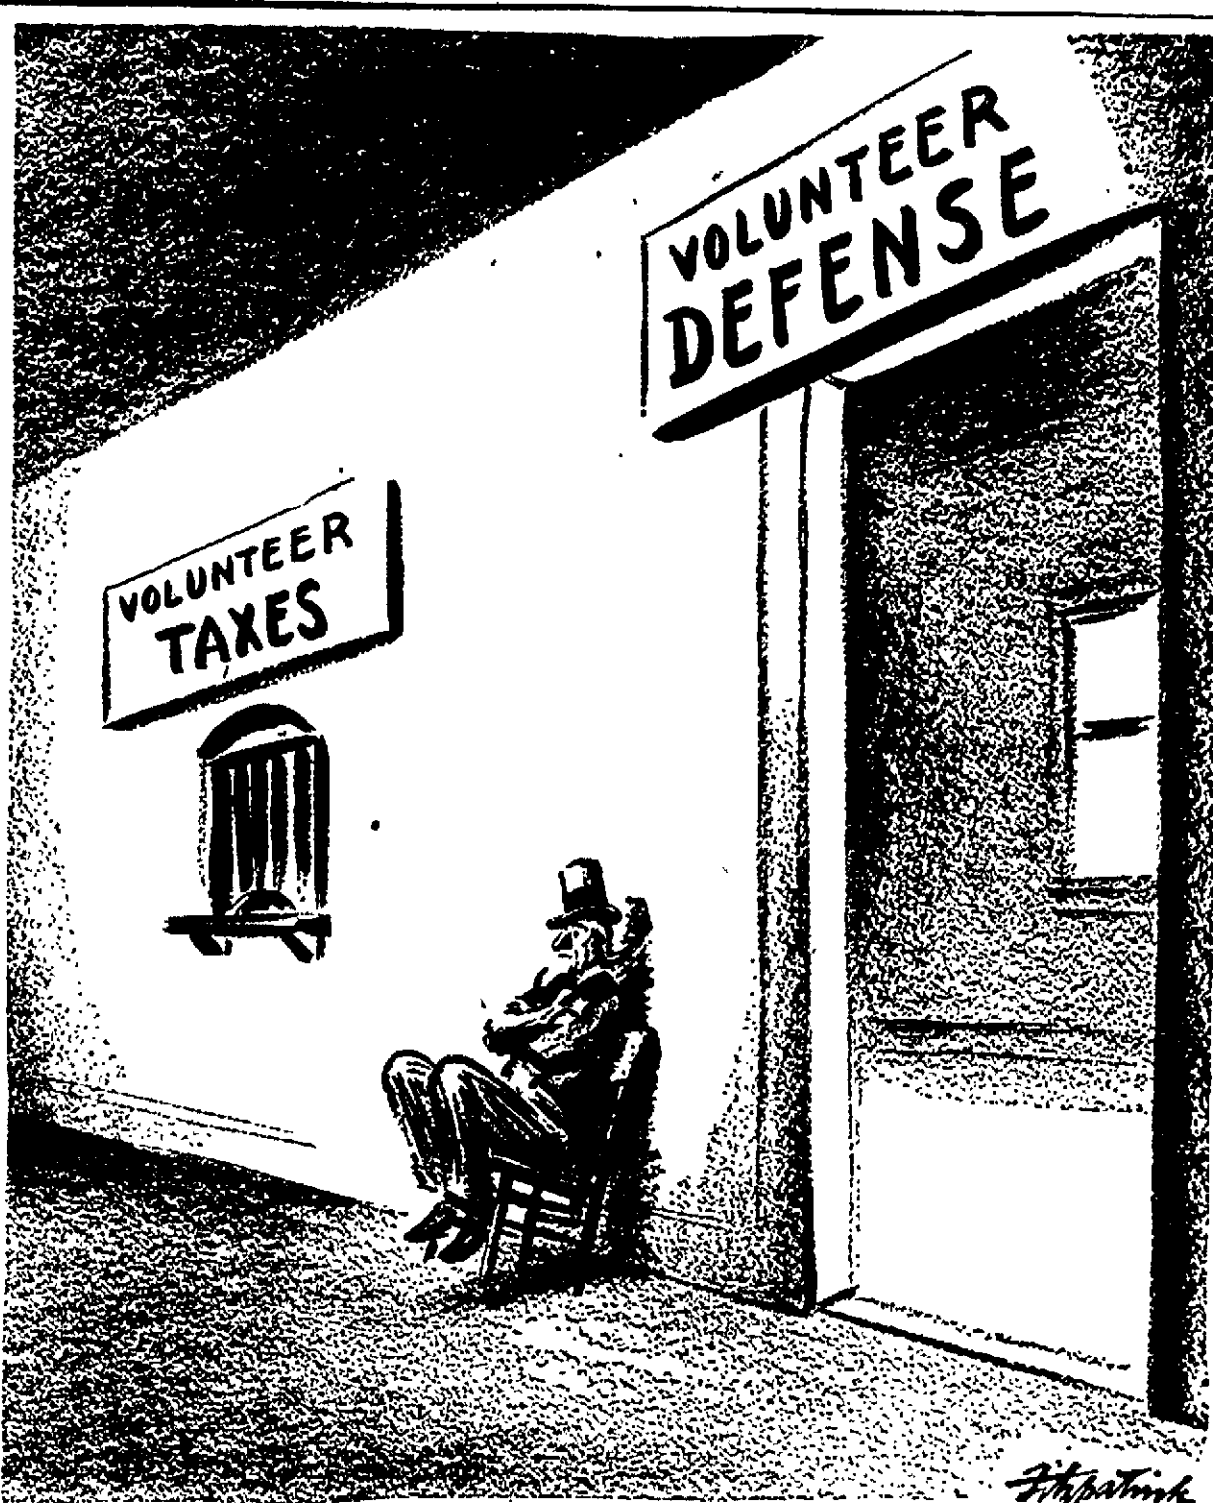

Perhaps our statesmen are making a mistake, maybe the military training should apply only to the mothers. Let Junior stay home and grow soft and fat. Maybe some day "adolf" will give him a state of military life that will make our American camp life seem like a church social.

Not in This Day and Age

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—Sensing the isolationist spirit which is held to be a traditional characteristic of Wisconsin public opinion, the voters of Wisconsin are going to be bombarded with assurances this summer and fall by the numerous candidates for congress and the United States senate that if elected they will never vote to send American and Wisconsin boys to fight on foreign soil.

Because there is such a uniformity of opinion among the various contenders on that subject, however, the pledge loses much of its dramatic effect, making it necessary to find new means of dressing it up.

Two of the Republican candidates feel they have found a way. They are Michael G. Eberlein of Shawano, and Walter Chilsen of Merrill, the latter the only candidate who is openly and frankly appealing to the Townsend vote to get him the nomination.

Eberlein has four sons, Chilsen has three; both will have their sons accompany them on their stump speaking tours to dramatize the degree of their personal interest in peace.

KENNY

Although D. J. Kenny of West Bend failed to appear to file the required nominating petitions for U. S. senator this week, from good Republican sources comes the word that he had resigned his seat on the Republican state executive committee only a week earlier with the expectation of becoming a candidate.

Although many believe that the entrance of Glenn Frank into the race deterred Kenny, his friends insist that the more likely reason is one which he referred to publicly a few weeks ago, the problem of financing a campaign.

HELP WANTED

The unusual number of candidates for high office in Wisconsin this year has revealed a scarcity of trained and competent publicity men.

Half a dozen candidates are now seeking press agents who can stimulate the publicity which all politicians find so necessary for successful campaigning. Just now all the available and experienced men seem to have been retained by the early arrivals in the primary fields.

FARM CIRCULATION

Probably the most faithful mail administration journal in Wisconsin is the Wisconsin Dairyland News published in Madison by Paul Weiss, erstwhile farm spokesman and organizer.

Weiss until a year or so ago leased the paper under an arrangement with the Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool, but differences in policy, arising particularly when Weiss wanted to favor the Republicans against the wishes of Harry Jack, Pool president and leading Progressive, brought an end to that relationship.

Now Weiss is in sole control, and is vigorously championing the cause of the Heil administration. In the 1938 election, it will be recalled, the Republicans bought up a whole edition of the paper and distributed thousands of copies in eight Wisconsin congressional districts. Such a plan is reportedly afoot again for the 1940 campaign.

NO ORGAN

In a sense, the relationship with Weiss illustrates how much the Republicans miss a newspaper medium in Wisconsin. It has never been fully explained why the Republicans, who were closely organized and relatively well financed even when they were out of power, have not been able to organize a

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

HOW OLD IS FIFTY?

A postcard query the other day depressed and exasperated the kindly conductor no end. Not because it was a postcard—I don't mind that unless the writer expects me to send some personal answer—but it depressed me because it seemed to indicate that my health teachings don't get under the skin of the people who most need health education, and it exasperated me because it reminded me that notwithstanding all the efforts of numerous agencies to arouse popular interest in positive health the great majority of laymen become interested in conserving health only when they realize their is gone.

This was the substance of the postcard query:

"Do you advocate rolling somersaults as a daily health habit? How is a person past fifty to attempt such acrobatics?"

"Acrobatics"? Did the writer of the query pass fifty in the gay nineties or is he or she under some misapprehension concerning the meaning of the word somersault? Unfortunately Webster and I are at loggerheads concerning the meaning of the word somersault. Webster says a somersault is a leap or jump in which a person turns his heels over his head, forward or backward, without touching the ground with any portion of the body. I call that an air spring. I say a somersault is simply crouching and rolling the body, forward or backward, without ever losing contact with the ground or floor—any playful five-year-old child can show you what I mean. That's my definition of somersault, and Webster may take it or leave it.

Turning air springs, I admit, would be acrobatics. Turning somersaults is like rolling off a log—for any one who is still able to get about under his own power at sixty or seventy.

The fundamental benefit one derives from rolling a dozen somersaults first thing every morning and last thing every night is, I believe, equalization of circulation. The maneuver (it is hardly an exercise) tends to remove stagnant blood from the great splanchnic pool—the area where nearly one-fourth of the entire volume of blood in the body may gravitate and remain more or less out of circulation, in the too sedentary, too dignified old geezer.

I particularly commend somersaulting to people, young or old, with mental depression or the blues, not due to known causes, but to individual health and as one consequence suffer with insomnia; and to young women or women of mature age who suffer from functional irregularities or disturbances.

The most enthusiastic testimonials I have received in reference to the benefits derived from rolling somersaults have come from men and women in their sixties and seventies.

It takes only 30 seconds to roll a dozen—I just timed myself on the floor in front of my desk—and that is the most profitable investment of time I can suggest for sedentary folk who do not get enough general exercise.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Signed Letters Pertaining To Hygiene

The instructions to correspondents or the rules for readers who seek information or advice clearly state that "Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a party newspaper as have the Progressives, who for several decades have maintained a militant, widely circulated weekly sheet here. Talk of founding such a paper earlier this year has completely disappeared.

stamped 3c self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many readers choose to ignore these reasonable requirements and send unsigned letters, postcards, loose stamps in lieu of stamped self-addressed envelope or requests for symptoms to try on, for diagnosis or for treatment. These uncomplaisable ones raise a fearful squawk when Ol' (Meanie) Doc Brady elects to give all of his time and attention to correspondents who heed the rules.

Examination Jitters

Please tell me again how to take quinine for examination jitters. (K. L. W.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for folder "Quinine in Modern Medicine." Begin at least two weeks before the ordeal, whether examination or public appearance) taking one grain of quinine sulphate (pill, tablet or capsule three time a day, and continue this up to the time you go on—or in, or down, or crazy, as the case may be.

Mucus

While agreeing with you for the most part I find it difficult to accept your conclusion that it is fallacy to say certain foods form mucus. Would appreciate your references for this assertion. (S. U. A.)

Ans.—No physiologist, physician or scientific authority imagines food ever forms mucus. That notion is a morbid fancy of the fake specialists to catch the gullible suckers, the wiseacres—and it catches plenty.

Dr Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, 75 El Camino, South, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO

Monday, Aug. 5, 1930
The worst drought in the country's history continued that day to pile up new endurance records—and the end was not in sight. A blistering heat wave held the entire mid-west in its grip.

William E. Schubert, chief engineer for the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, was to speak at the Kimmis club luncheon Wednesday noon.

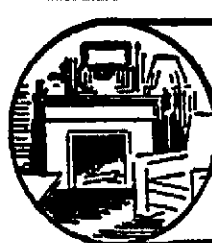

Victor Voecks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Voecks, 716 E. Pacific street, was ordained to the ministry Sunday morning in special services at St. Paul Lutheran church.

25 YEARS AGO

Monday, Aug. 9, 1915
Ground was to be broken soon for the new hotel at Neenah, according to F. J. Sensenbrenner. The new hotel was to have all outside rooms. It was expected to be completed in about eight months.

Straws from several quarters indicated that the breeze of popular favor was blowing more strongly in President Wilson's direction. General approval of his foreign policy was being expressed.

Trustworthy sources said Emperor or William of Germany, through the king of Denmark, had offered Russia terms of peace. The reply of the czar to the Danish monarch's letter was the categorical declaration that at that time there could be no question of peace negotiations. Having failed to carry out her original program of crushing France in the first few months of the war, Germany had altered her general plan and was straining to eliminate Russia from the conflict.

Lasting Beauty Is Found in Colormix Floors, Schabo Says

A Colormix floor, besides being durable and attractive, will save you time and money.

Built-in warmth of permanent beauty only can be had during the course of construction. That is why architects and builders throughout the country have recognized for years the economy of Colormix floors and insist upon their use in preference to painted cement finish which peels and wears off causing no end of inconvenience and annoyance—to say nothing of additional expense extended throughout the life of the structure. Colormix is handled by Henry Schabo and Son Fuel company, 912 W. College avenue.

Colormix floors are receiving wide acceptance by the thoughtful home owner who desires a permanent floor which will last the life of his home, one that in addition to its beauty is waterproof and dustproof.

Colormix floors are in general use for such areas as recreation rooms, garages, driveways, terraces, patios, walks, porches, roof decks and sun porches. A variety of colors may be had, and a visit to the Henry Schabo and Son Fuel company, 912 W. College avenue, will convince you

Home Builder Should Secure Heating Facts

Eisele Engineering Company Offers Free Information, Estimates

In the purchase or the building of a home there are a variety of considerations which the prospective home owner must decide according to the needs of the family, its tastes and its income. The heating equipment is a matter of supreme importance to which the home builder or home buyer often pays too little attention, the Eisele Engineering company, 427 W. College avenue, points out.

A warm house in cold weather is an indispensable requisite to the health and comfort of its occupants. No amount of pleasing color schemes, labor saving gadgets and fine furniture will compensate for the discomforts of faulty, insufficient or undependable heat. These pitfalls can be avoided by consulting the Eisele firm, an establishment qualified and ready to fill the heating needs of any size or type home.

The annual cost of home heating should be budgeted carefully with an eye to the comparative operating costs of various types of heating equipment and the choice of fuels. Free estimates and full information

Cheapest to Buy Good Quality Standard Paint

A house owner who is considering the painting of his property sometimes is in doubt whether to use ready-mixed paint or paint mixed to order. Good paint is good whether ready mixed or mixed to order. Vice versa, bad paint is bad!

The purchaser's main safeguard is to purchase standard goods of known reliability, whether he buys ready-mixed in cans or white lead, zinc, oil and colors to be mixed by his painter.

Owners are sometimes influenced, when purchasing paint or ingredients, by price but first economy is likely to prove costly. A brand of white lead costing a few cents per pound less than some other well known brand may be inferior in quality. It may have received less grinding, it frequently contains a larger percentage of foreign matter. Also one can pay different prices for linseed oil, boiled oil being more expensive than raw oil and the former producing a better paint job.

are gladly offered by the Eisele company to guide the client in the selection of an economical and efficient heating system.

The important thing, the firm asserts, is to get the facts and learn the comparative advantages of the heating equipment, automatic or otherwise, which is offered by the company and installed by its skilled workmen.

This saves time and money, the benefit of which is passed on to the owner. This pumpcrete machine is but one of the many modern contrivances of the Koepke firm which makes for better workmanship in a shorter period of time.

The builder need not worry about workmanship for the Koepke Construction uses only top quality materials with work done under supervision of experts maintained full-time on the firm's staff.

Joe Mayefski Holds Prison Nine to Five Hits in Exhibition Tilt

Menasha — Falcons scored a 5 to 1 victory over the Waupun prison team Saturday afternoon at Waupun behind the 5-hit pitching of Joe "Daddy" Mayefski. The veteran hurler would have had a shut-out except for a streak of wildness in the seventh inning in which he hit two batters and Magalski committed two errors to permit Waupun its lone run.

The Falcons supported Mayefski with a 10-hit attack, including homers by Al Britzke and George Hoffman, new pitcher for the Falcons who performed in right field. Although Mayefski did not fan a man, he kept the Waupun batters off balance and forced them into easy outs. He walked two and hit two batters.

The Menasha nine started its scoring in the fourth inning when four singles counted two runs. Britzke, J. Kolakowski, Art Buzanowski, and Hoffman connected for hits. In the seventh Hoffman homered to right field with none on. F. Kolakowski singled in the eighth and Al Britzke followed with a homer to right center that counted the final two runs in the eighth.

Women Help Men Make Up Mind in Matrimony

BY DOROTHY DIX

To marry or not to marry? That is the question that perturbs innumerable bachelors who can't for the life of them decide whether they prefer a wife and kids, or their own pay envelope and latchkey. Each has its points. Much is to be said in favor of marriage, with an ever-loving wife to welcome one home with a glad, sweet smile and the patter of little feet making music in one's ears. But there is the equally alluring picture of a man being able to come and go as he pleases, with no questions asked and no necessity for furnishing an air-tight alibi for every minute of time he is away from home; of being able to spend his money for his own behoof and benefit instead of seeing it go for finger-waves and facials and Paris gowns and household expenses, and of always being able to flit to a new love when the old love puts on weight and gets argumentative. And equally does each estate have its disadvantages. Marriage isn't always what it is press-agented to be. Not all wives are ever-loving. Some are ever-nagging. Some are sloppy housekeepers and poison their husbands on bad cooking. And children are as frequent brats as angels. Nor is the lot of the bachelor one of unmarred joy. Bought love lacks savor, and it takes the edge off of freedom to know that the reason one is free is because, no one cares what one does.

In fact, so much is to be said on both sides of the marrying problem that probably no man would ever make up his mind what to do about it if some woman didn't make up his mind for him and drag him to the altar before he could debate the subject any longer.

A Bachelor's Dilemma

In the meantime we can but sympathize with these perplexed souls, one of whom asks my advice on the subject. He writes:

"I am a middle-aged bachelor, and sometimes a spell of loneliness comes over me that makes me feel that I should have a partner to go with me the balance of life's journey, but I do not know whether to risk marrying or not.

"And I get no satisfaction from my friends when I consult them. The single ones, who have never tried it, say to get married if I can. But nearly all of the married men whom I have asked warn me against it and say that if I am looking for trouble the quickest way to find it is to get a wife. Which ones are right?"

Of course, marriage is a venture whose outcome no one can predict with absolute certainty. So is every thing else you do. There are no sure things in life. No guarantees of success. But we don't refrain from traveling because there are occasional train and aeroplane wrecks. We don't sit down and fold our hands in idleness because plenty of other men and women have failed as lawyers or doctors or green grocers.

Favor Marriage

And that is the way it is with marriage. There are marriages that end in divorce. Marriages that are a fight from start to finish. But there are also marriages that are filled with the best happiness life can offer, and the chances of getting one of these lucky numbers are so good that it makes the gamble worthwhile.

I think a man is better off married than single, even when his wife does not come up to his ideal. He is settled, for one thing, and has an objective in life.

If you will notice you will observe that most men never achieve success until after they are married. He has a consolation prize in his children. He has a protection against his predatory relatives and friends who feel that a bachelor's money belongs to them.

And he lives longer. Insurance companies say that it is a wife's nagging her husband about putting on his flannels and wearing his rubbers and going to see a doctor about his cough that keeps many a man out of the grave for years and years.

So a wife is a good risk. Take one.

What to Do About Untidy Daughter
Dear Dorothy Dix—How can I persuade my daughter to keep her room neat and clean? She is beautiful, highly educated, a talented musician, but she is the most untidy person you ever saw. Now that I am an invalid and cannot clean up her room for her, it is like a pigsty. Piled up with clothes and shoes and with powder and hair combs a year deep on her dresser. Young men come to see her once or twice and then quit coming, and I think it is because they can see into her room, which opens into the living

Psychic Was 'Fancy' but Not Risky

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Experts take enormous liberties with bidding conventions, but there is one thing they never, or rarely, do and that is make a psychic take-out in a suit that is higher ranking than the one they intend for the final contract. Consider South's technique in today's hand. It is true that he was "fancy," but it must be noted that he incurred little, if any, risk.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable; both sides.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 heart Double 2 diam. (1) 2 spades
3 diam. Double 3 hearts Pass
Pass Double Pass Pass

Over East's take-out double of the one heart South, with tremendous heart support but a very poor general hand and little defense, really wanted to "psych" in spades, since that was the suit which could embarrass him most if the opponents should bid it. Of course, he also had to fear both diamonds and clubs, but at least he could overbid these with hearts at the same level. But he realized that to bid spades as a bluff would be dangerous, since if North had good spade support he would raise strongly, and then hearts could be returned to only at a prohibitive level. South discarded the thought of preempting in hearts, feeling that on the state of the score this would merely induce West to "stretch" for a bid. He adopted the two diamond bid, intending, of course, after he had misled the opponents as to the distribution of his hand, to return to hearts.

East certainly had a splendid double of three diamonds, and West's pass to three hearts also was correct, since his partner might be waiting for it with a budge. But East went far astray when he doubled three hearts. He foolishly assumed that, since South had bid diamonds and North had supported them, he would make two or three diamond tricks even with hearts as trump. The fallacy of this assumption is obvious: There was no guarantee that South's diamond take-out had been "on the level." West cannot be blamed for leaving in the double, because it was not up to him to nurse his partner.

North-South made an overtrick at three hearts doubled, whereas four spades would have been a laydown, even against the best defense of a diamond opening lead and a continuation which South would ruff.

My Neighbor Says—

At least once a year take down shades, stretch them out on a flat surface and after dusting them thoroughly go over them with a wet (not dripping) cloth rubbed lightly with white soap. Clean a portion of the shade at a time, rinsing off the soap with a cloth squeezed out of clear water. Dry thoroughly.

A quart of milk for the child, a pint for the adult, daily with whole grain cereals, with leafy and other vegetables, besides the potato, and with the citrus and other fruits, will protect the body against disease and make for good health.

When a lighted match is held at the base of the flower stem, a flash of light will be produced. This is due to the secretion of a resinous substance by the flower stalk. It ignites best in the late afternoon or evening of hot days, and may be done without any damage to the plant.

Both Dictamnus fraxinella alba, white; and Dictamnus fraxinella rubra, rose purple, reach a height of three feet, and bear curiously shaped flowers in upright racemes.

Plants may be raised from seed sown in a deep, rich, loamy soil in a sunny place. Sow now for spring germination.

In the planting site, mix one tablespoonful of complete, balanced plant food, to each square foot of space, working it in lightly. Then feed every four to six weeks after growth starts in the spring.

To bring out the full beauty of the foliage and the attractive outline of the plant, it is best grown singly, and not in groups of two, three or more.

Beauty and You

FRIENDLY SMILE—A friendly, smiling personality such as Virginia Vale possesses is a good passport to popularity. Virginia is a new hope for the films.

Legion are the girls who are shy, and legion are those who are unpopular. Either condition makes one unhappy so the best thing to do is to face why you are shy or unpopular.

There are many reasons for unpopularity. A girl may be careless about her personal grooming; her skin may be blemished and require corrective treatments; she may be difficult to talk to, too accomplished in any way, too dull although pretty to look at, too eager for attention, too gossipy, too snobbish, too arrogant. She may think herself inferior to her immediate group of acquaintances, or worse still, superior; she may be too talkative, too bossy, too timid, too proud, or too self-indulgent. Her figure and posture may tell the world that she is defeated; inhibition or affectation are other traits which make people shy away. Oh, I could go on and on naming characteristics which make for unpopularity, but instead I shall try to tell those girls who are thus afflicted what to do to earn popularity.

Don't Be An Introvert
Introvert is the term used to describe any person who is too self-analytical and inhibited. Don't be an introvert. Frankly I think many introverts are simply lazy people—too lazy to make the effort to conform with current standards of friendship. Be certain that is not your malady!

Each day the shy or unpopular girl should take a step in conquering her qualms. She should force herself to like people and to learn to handle them. She should learn how to meet situations. Never once should she backslide—give in to that feeling, "Oh, it's hopeless! I'll never be desired like other girls." That is not true. Today you need not be beautiful to be popular. Many an ugly duckling has grown good an example before them as you set before your Latin classes.

Continuity of Influence
Life is really much like a relay race in which we carry the baton for a short stretch and then hand it on to others.

It has been only 77 generations since Christ gave us the Golden Rule and a lofty example of personal conduct. Only 76 relay runners, so to speak, have stood between us and that distant crisis.

If each of those 76 men and women had not faithfully and bravely carried on, then the baton would have dropped. Selfishness and paganism would no longer engulf us. The rights of minorities would not even be heard of.

There is a psychological exhilaration and zest in linking up with noble causes and carrying the baton of civilization. Take stock of yourself, therefore, and be sure you carry the baton as straight, and swiftly as possible to the next generation, waiting to receive it from your hands.

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

If you want to get a real thrill out of life, just seize the baton as runner No. 77 and see how well you can advance it before you hand it over to runner No. 78. Civilization is a relay race where each generation swiftly moves forward or holds up the rapid advance by strife and war. Today's heroine has ably carried the baton as runner No. 76.

Case R-137: Mary H., aged 65, is retiring from a career as high school teacher of Latin.

"Since you were one of her pupils, we wonder if you'd mind sending us a telegram or a letter for our memorial banquet?" wrote a member of the committee.

So I took time out at once to type the following letter:

"I wish to join the thousands of other former students in congratulating you upon the conclusion of a very fruitful educational career.

"You were always an outstanding credit to the teaching profession, for you not only infused your students with an enthusiasm for the subject matter of your specific courses, but, more important than that, you set an example of loyalty and devotion to moral principles.

"These extra-curricular influences of your character are woven in the personalities of your many pupils, and will bear fruit long after they have forgotten how to conjugate Latin verbs.

A Tribute To My Teacher
"Indeed, your constructive example has left its stamp on more than one generation. At breakfast this morning, for example, my mother said that when you two were in college together, you always were a shining example in her because of your active work in the Y. W. C. A. and your fine Christian character.

"You can see, therefore, that the teaching of Latin has been but a small part of your larger educational influence in this world.

"Though you are now retiring from the high school classroom, you still have those other, more important duties to perform, and should lead an even fuller life.

"As a dynamo of constructive energy, you really don't need to be reminded of the psychological precept that it is better to wear out in good works than to rust out in idleness.

Goodness Has No Wrinkles
"Your kindly sympathy and generous espousal of worthy causes are not affected by your retirement from the teaching of Latin.

"Goodness has no wrinkles and selfishness is eternally young. If, as Pitkin so aptly put it, life really begins at 40, then at the age of 65 it should be flourishing.

"You invested time and patience in my education. Now I am passing some of the products of your training along to thousands of other students.

"I only hope that I can set half as

Warn Children Against Poison Ivy, Patri Says

BY ANGELO PATRI

Once more we must warn children against poison ivy. It is a lovely looking vine, with three parts to each leaf. Its new growth is reddish bronze. In its old age blooms and bears lovely waxen berries. It is the meanest enemy of a happy summer for some children that grows in the fields.

First, teach children who go to the country how to recognize this enemy, and to keep away from it. Then teach them to prevent it from harming them.

Don't go close to it when it is wet. Don't break it, don't touch it. Don't be brave about it. Just keep out of its reach.

Before going out to be exposed to it cover the legs and arms and face with a lather of brown laundry soap. Let that lather dry on the skin. Then keep out of it as carefully as ever.

When the excursion is over, wash with warm water, scrubbing thoroughly, and rinse and dry. That simple precaution will prevent an infection and save plenty of trouble and expense.

Call a Doctor
Teach children to look carefully at the grass before they sit down on it when they go out to picnic or to play. Heedless, unknowing little ones have sat down in a bed of poison ivy to their great grief.

If after every precaution has been taken the child is infected, ask the physician to see him and prescribe for him. Only the experienced physician can help him then.

What seems to help one child often fails to help another, and no time should be lost in getting expert help as the thing spreads. Its burning itch is intolerable. If it gets a head-start on a child who is highly susceptible he is likely to be very ill indeed.

Children must be kept from scratching the rash, if possible. It is hardly possible but by keeping the lotion the physician prescribes in constant use much of it can be avoided. Scratching brings on secondary infections and they are mighty mean.

Avoid Ivy and Mosquitoes
The combination of a mosquito bite, well scratched, and an infection of poison ivy is about the worst that can happen to a vacationing child. It will lay him up and spoil all his fun. If the mosquitoes are plentiful and active,

HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

Chapter 34

"Old Gregory is hard-headed and practical. Never encouraged the boy with his music. Wanted him to learn finance," Doctor Burlingham informed Jan.

"But now—now he must be proud?"

"Proud as a peacock! We may see him this evening. Have you known, Derek, long, Miss Merriner?"

Jan kept her eyes shyly on the triangular velvet bag in her lap. "Not very long," she said softly. "He and my brother were friends out on the Coast. Oh, I do hope his debut is a success!"

Doctor Murray, who had changed the subject, leaving her to her private thoughts and dreams until they were in the box in the great auditorium and the lights were dimmed and Jan leaned forward, her lips parted in breathless joy, to see Derek seated at the piano, at the center of the stage, a vague, rapid smile on his strained white face.

"My Derek," her heart whispered, defying the ridicule of her mind.

The first deep tones of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto in C Minor lifted into the hush. Jan leaned back, her eyes half-closed, her heart pounding at her ribs, reveling in the glorious, somber music. Following this came Beethoven's Sixth Symphony and Liszt's Fourth Hungarian Rhapsody, then in the few seconds before the beginning of Derek's concerto, she sensed the straining expectancy of the listeners, the speculation that set them on edge and sharpened their ears.

Her own ears actually pained from tensed nerves. Someone put a pair of opera glasses in her hand and as she focused them on Derek her heart seemed to be turning hand-springs in her breast. Her lips moved in earnest, unconscious prayer and then, swelling the roof were magnificent, thrilling tones which brought tears to her eyes!

On and on swept the splendid flood of sound, telling a story of heartbreak and fear and death and birth and joy, penetrating into the hearts and souls of amazed, incredulous listeners ending on a whisper of minor lullaby.

"Then people were clapping, standing up to shout 'Bravo! Bravo!'" out for a third marriage? Mother has friends everywhere due to the fact that my own father's business took us all over the country, and that her second husband was an army man. We thought the announcements were many times as she has friends would be a good deal of a chore. In the event that this would not be out of place, whose name should appear at the top to announce the marriage—mine alone, or my husband's and mine, or mother's? And in either case, please give the wording.

Answer: "Announcing a third marriage is, I must acknowledge, carrying it rather far! But unless she minds the possibility of criticism from the conservatives, there is no other objection—especially if she is sending notices only to those who are interested friends. She and her husband should announce their marriage together. (This, by the way, is the one exceptional occasion when Mrs. before a woman's Christian name is permissible.) The following form is entirely correct:

Mrs. Jane Andrews and Mr. Herman Rose announce their marriage on Monday the second of September at New Lake, New York.

At a Musical
Dear Mrs. Post: At a musical are the guests served tea first, or is the musical program first and tea served after that?

Answer: Music first, refreshments afterwards.

Dear Mrs. Post: Mother is marrying for the third time, my father and stepfather both having died. I am an only child, married and living in this same town. Am engraved marriage announcements ever sent while the young composer bowed his head, his face very white, his tall, thin body visibly shaken.

After the concert Doctor Burlingham held a whispered conference with Doctor Murray. Then the curtains enclosing the box were parted and Derek stood looking at her.

"Jan! What in the world are you doing here?"

"All of her pretty rehearsed speeches fled into the limbo of lost words and all she could do was look up at him and weep. He held out his arms and she stumbled into them.

"How's the old albatross doing? Aren't you right proud of him?" he grinned down at her. On a whisper he said, "I was thinking of you when I played, realizing it was you who made it all possible."

"Your music is—what you always wanted it to be," she managed to say.

"Wait For Me"

Then, abruptly, the spell of happy reunion was broken, and she was being swept with a tide of people to the foyer below, being separated from Derek who was smiling and bowing and acknowledging congratulations.

"Wait for me, Jan," he called to her across intervening heads. She tried to stand still and could not because of the resistless pressure of milling people and, in the orderly confusion, she lost sight of Doctor Murray and the others with him and found herself alone in a corner.

Well, what did it matter if she were lost? She could see Derek, lowering a head above the crowd, turning this way and that seeking to escape to her. She was content to wait. Blissfully content.

Now as the crowd thinned she worked her way toward him, shivering slightly with nervous reaction. Yet before she could reach him she saw a tall, fabulously beautiful girl in white ermine slip her arm possessively through his and kiss him affectionately as cameras flashed. Jan stopped, remembering. This was the girl of the newspaper picture. Lenore Page. The woman Derek had loved so desperately.

Choking back a sob she turned the deep shirr collar of her wrap up about her face and darted toward the nearest exit, found herself caught in a human wedge and begged in muffled tones: "Excuse me, please! Please let me through!"

But before she succeeded a firm arm caught her shoulder and pulled her backward. "What's the idea of running out on a celebrity?" Derek scolded into her small, pink ear. "I thought you'd have a lot of things to say to me."

She kept her eyes determinedly on his starched shirt front. "I did forget to thank you for selling my sketches," she said in stiff, formal tones. "It was so very kind of you to bother. I guess I'm a celebrity, too, in a small way."

"Then we've got to celebrate!" he insisted.

A silvery, intimate voice called. "Derek darling! Our friends are waiting. Hurry, will you?"

Jan's round chin came up stubbornly. "Is that the girl you told me of Derek?"

"Lenore? Yes, Jan. Meeting her again was the best thing that ever happened to me!"

Jan smothered a heartbroken wail, for Lenore, furred and perfumed and not too subtly possessive, was upon them. Jan caught a reflection of herself and Lenore in a great pier glass and the comparison numbed her. Words from long ago flashed across her mind—"You look like a sweet girl graduate!"

Lenore tugged at Derek with her pretty hands, ruling him toward a laughing group of young people. It was just too marvelous and too terribly exciting, she said. None of them had understood or appreciated

Flattering simplicity has "stand-out-from-the-crowd distinction" anywhere! This new frock, Pattern 4403, owes its good looks to no-fuss details and careful styling by Anne Adams. Make it of a dark, soft fabric... keep the Sewing Instructor on hand for easy reference. Those three front skirt panels make you appear taller and slimmer. Notice how gracefully the neckline curves. The attractively shaped front yokes hold soft gathers below and there's a straight-across yoke that smooths down the gently bloused lines in back. If this style is to be a more dress-up frock, why not have the yokes and optional sleevebands in a lovely contrasting lace?

Pattern 4403 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 34 yards 39 inch fabric.

his great gift, but now they were awaiting, anxious to worship at his shrine and willing to offer libations of champagne.

"Hold on, Lennie," he halted her. "I want you to meet a very special friend of mine, Jan Merriner."

Lenore's long violet eyes took swift shrewd measurement of the other girl from under dusky satin lids. "So nice," she murmured. "Where have you been keeping her, Ricky?"

"She just arrived from the Coast," he explained. "She's a friend from my bus-driving days, also she's an up and coming young artist who just recently won recognition in a national magazine for her superb drawings of cats."

"Cats?" Lenore shuddered. "I can't bear the slinking, furry things! Oh, do come along, Ricky, everyone is waiting. You must lunch with me one day. Miss—oh, dear, I'm just no good at names!"

"Goodbye," Jan said quickly, seeing Doctor Murray coming toward her, concern sobering his merry smile as he quickly estimated the situation. Before Derek could restrain her, she slipped away and hurried the little doctor to the waiting limousine.

"I," insisted the good doctor after glimpsing her hurt, forlorn eyes, "want to make a night of it as you say in America. The gayest of night clubs and," he chuckled, "the hottest of hot spots!"

Cocktail Ingredients
Temporarily distracted, Jan dimmed and danced and enjoyed her sort of into New York's night life with the exuberant doctor. The clock in the hotel lobby said three when she went up to her room in the hotel, anticipating a good, long, uninterupted rest. She closed and locked the door and leaned against it.

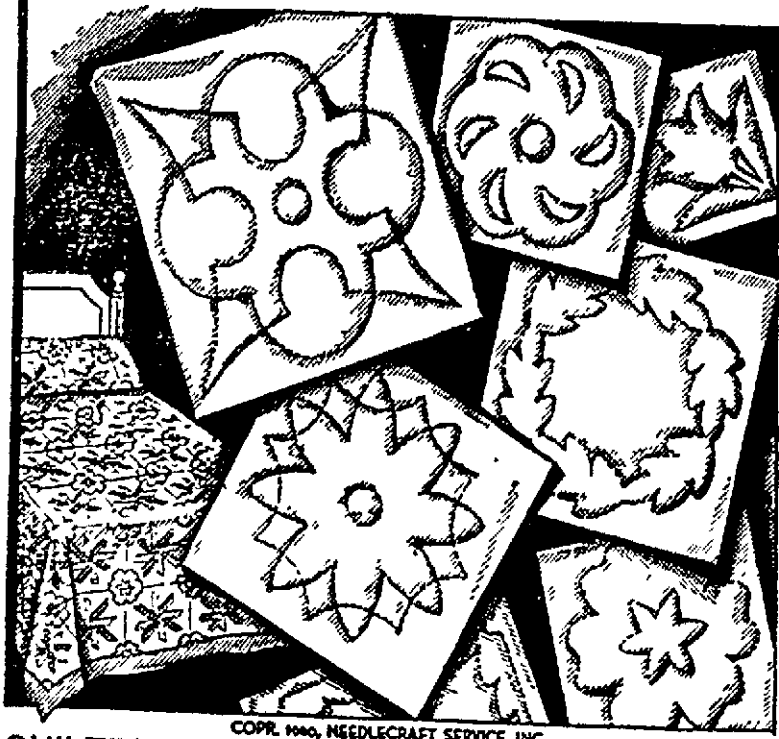

"Ricky!" she exploded. "Lennie! They sound like cocktail ingredients! Take aigger of Ricky and two dashes of Lennie, some cracked ice and you have—a headache!"

She pulled off her dress, jumped into the middle of the bed and buried her head in the middle of a fat, white pillow and angrily sobbed all the nonsense out of her head, but not out of her heart—if it was nonsense, and she hoped it was, that her heart, whispered for it told her, despite all conclusions and common sensibilities, that she loved Derek Knowles, had loved him since the first time he kissed her, and whether or no, she would keep right on loving him because she was that kind of person and there was nothing she could do about it.

"There it is!" she denied loudly. "I can refuse to see him again. I can go home the minute Lance is able to travel and be an old maid and pursue."

Guests Vote in 'Political' Contests as Dinner-Dance Is Held at Riverview Club

Willkie won, but Richard E. Thickers, Menasha, ran him a close second, trailing by only three votes, and gave his acceptance speech at the "political" dinner-dance Saturday night at Riverview Country club. One of the gayest parties given at the club this season, the affair was attended by about 200 persons. Voting booths were set up in the entrance hall and guests balloted on a list of candidates, some of them serious and some of them humorous, as they entered. Pictures of Willkie and Roosevelt, as well as campaign slogans decorated the clubhouse, and state placards at the tables gave the place the appearance of a political convention hall.

Bruce Purdy, chairman of the committee in charge of the party, was host to a party of 16. His guests were Miss Mary Fannon, Miss Peggy Jennings and Sidney Dutcher, Appleton; Miss Jeanne Sage, Miss Margaret McNaughton, Miss Jane Sensenbrenner, Miss Mimi Mory, Mowry Smith and Don Westerbeck, Neenah; Miss Laura Thickers and Dr. Richard Jensen, Menasha; Miss Betty Ulrich, Pete Fierston and Ted Allison, Milwaukee; and Goodwin Elwick, Minneapolis.

Applause at this remark was mixed with a small scattering of boos. "I want to conduct this campaign on issues and not on personalities," the nominee continued. "I will make no ill remark about either of the other gentlemen who are opposing me unless they first make some ill remark about me."

At a press conference after his talk with 70-odd mid-western farm leaders, Willkie said he had remarked to the group that he wanted their viewpoint "as the candidate for president and the next president."

He said his conferees told him that one of the chief criticisms of the administration's farm policy was that local authorities were supervised and controlled from Washington.

The Republican nominee asserted there had been no effort to arrive at any general agreement on a farm program.

The whole conference was designed, Willkie continued, merely to give him the enlightened viewpoint of men who are doing the actual job on farming.

Increased Nazi Activity Keeps British Alert

bombardment, Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported today.

New British air bases, the agency said, were discovered by Italian scouting planes and attacked by strong bombing squadrons.

Not only was a large hangar set afire at Haiya, important Anglo-Egyptian Sudan railway center, Stefani declared, but planes on the ground were damaged so badly they were put out of action.

Besides these blows along the Red Sea front in east Africa, the Italian high command reported 10 British planes shot down in a three air battle yesterday when the British attempted to bomb Libyan troops near the Egyptian frontier in North Africa.

In all, it said, Britain lost 14 planes yesterday in Africa.

The new British air bases were discovered particularly in the upper Sudan, Stefani said.

Italians considered the attack on the Haiya railroad junction, where the tracks were reported ripped up, as of first importance since rail lines linking the Sudan territory with Port Sudan on the Red Sea meet there.

Summit, another strategic center in Sudan, was said to have been hard hit by air attack.

The agency said the Italian air force had set out systematically to destroy strong British air bases all around Italian colonies in Africa.

Planes Shot Down
Cairo, Egypt — (U) — Three Italian planes were shot down in a big air battle yesterday in eastern Libya in extensive operations in which only one British plane is missing, a Royal Air Force communiqué reported today.

The British declared that their reconnaissance aircraft, accompanied by four fighters, met 50 Italian fighters in eastern Libya and shot down two of them in flames, while a third plane was the victim of anti-aircraft fire of its own ground forces.

An earlier communiqué of the R.A.F. said British planes scored direct hits on an Italian naval vessel and showered bombs on a squadron of submarines in an attack on the harbor of Massaua, Eritrea.

Insects That Skate on Ponds Are Among Most Interesting

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Hussong

"Whirligigs," "water boatmen," "water striders," "skaters" and "skippers" are some of the interesting names given to the various insects found on ponds and shallow streams.

A study of fresh water insect life was the suggestion for August given in the outline for monthly field trips at the beginning of the year.

Small ponds in low meadows, slow-moving shallow streams, sheltered cove of lakes, bays and larger rivers and even roadside ditches are good places to look for these active forms of insect life who hop, skip, glide or tread over the water's surface. Many of these water bugs are so tiny they would hardly be noticed except for the ripples they cause in the water, ever widening circles or triangular paths much like those made by speed boats.

Has Poor Sight
Some water bugs spend only their immature life on water and when they become adult winged insects they take to the land, but a good many spend their entire life on or near water. For the most part they are carnivorous, feeding on other water insect life, or on the larvae of land-flying insects who spend their youths in water. A few are cannibals, devouring their own brothers and sisters, and nearly all are equipped with sharp beaks, mandibles, pinchers or other devices for stunning or killing their prey.

The whirligig beetle is one of the most interesting in the group. It looks like a flat, shiny black seed as it travels around and around in circles on the surface of the water. Although it has four eyes, it has poor sight and searches for food with its feelers or antennae.

The feelers are sensitive to ripples caused by other insects in the water. By traveling in circles the beetle covers ground quickly and through the feelers it locates its food. It uses its first pair of legs for grasping and the other two pairs for swimming.

Scientists (and small boys) discovered that by removing the whirligig's feelers it was unable to detect the presence of any other insect in the water or any obstruction such as a wall. An antennaeless whirligig bumps into a wall, rock or any other obstruction even though it is only an inch or two away.

Life of Whirligig
A short life history of the whirligig will give you an idea of the life process of most water bugs. The female lays the pale yellow eggs on the water and they drop to the mud at the bottom. In two weeks the larvae hatch out. They are about a quarter of an inch in length and look like tiny centipedes. Their outer covering is so transparent that the internal organs and even the movements of the digestive tracts may be seen.

The young whirligig larva feeds on any water life it finds at the bottom of the pool, sucking out the juices of its prey and leaving an empty shell. By the end of the summer it has molted several times and is an inch long. Now it begins building its winter home, a tiny mud cell like a miniature adobe house, which is placed on a rock sticking out of the water. It carries the mud up from the bottom of the stream.

It spends the winter months in its mud cell and in spring emerges as an adult black whirligig. Not all of its time is spent in traveling about in dizzy circles. It can float motionless in the water, fly some distance in the air or dive down to the bottom of the pool. When handled, these beetles eject an unpleasant smelling, milky fluid. In some species the ejected fluid has a pleasant fragrance, which has earned them the nickname of "perfumery bugs."

Water striders look like elongated spiders with six legs instead of the spider's usual eight. They stride over the water but in spite of their long legs they do not break its surface, merely dimple it. This is because their bodies are very light and covered with a fine plush which repels water. Sometimes you will find them sunning their long legs in the marsh grass near a pond.

The "Darningneedle"
Water boatmen are small grayish bugs whose long flattened hind legs are fringed with hair and are used like paddles to propel the body forward. The back-swimmers, another group, do just that, swim on their backs. Their backs are keeled, like the bottom of a boat, and when they wish to travel they flip over.

"Darning needles," country children call the various dragon flies and damselflies but of course there is no truth to the tale of their ability to sew shut the mouths of bad boys. Their gleaming bodies of red, black, green or blue and their lacy, colored wings made them the most beautiful of all water insects. In their adult life they travel over land a good deal and may be seen in meadows and even forests but in their immature nymph forms they are found in water.

Just watching these many water bugs in a pond or stream, without trying to learn their names, is good entertainment but an insect book will give you many interesting facts about them which will make a field trip of this sort still more fun. For the amateur the little handbook, "Bugs of America," by Fazzini, will suffice because it pictures and describes at least a dozen varieties found in water. This book is one of the series of inexpensive handbooks on flowers, birds, trees, butterflies and other nature subjects published by Whitman's of Racine.

Effect of Hatch Act on Campaign Under Discussion
Fond du Lac — (U) — The Republican State Advisory council believes that a conference of Wisconsin Republican leaders should be called to interpret the possible effect of the Hatch act on the Wisconsin political campaign.

The council voted here Saturday to ask the state voluntary committee chairman and Wisconsin representatives of the national finance committee to confer with national committee member Edward A. Bacon, of Milwaukee, to discuss the national Hatch act and to map strategy for the presidential campaign.

Attorney Carl Rix of Milwaukee, discussing the act, advised state and local committees not to seek contributions from the national committee, but to raise their campaign funds independently.

He said that if the state committee raised funds on its own account and also received funds from the national committee, the entire sum would be credited to the amount which the law permits the national committee to spend.

The meeting here to discuss plans for the fall campaign was called by Bacon.

BRITAIN'S BIG WALL.

In times of peace, thousands of tourists in Great Britain go to see Hadrian's Wall. Much of it has fallen to ruin with the passing of time, but enough is left to make it interesting to a visitor.

The Wall is more than 1,800 years old and dates back to the time when the Romans were in control of most of "Britain."

The Romans did not rule the northern part of the island. That part was in the hands of "wild tribesmen." They belonged to the white race, but were hardly better civilized than the older American Indians.

The Romans had towns and camps in many parts of England. The Picts, on the other hand, lived chiefly in what we now call Scotland.

Quite often there was "border trouble." The Picts and the Romans did not agree on the boundary line.

The Romans of that time were supposed to be the hardest fighters in the world, but the Picts were able to put up a fierce battle. Before Hadrian's Wall was built, they often made raids on Roman camps and villages.

The Roman emperor Hadrian visited Britain. While there, he saw the need for the wall, and ordered it to be prepared.

Hadrian's Wall stretched across the island, from the Solway Firth to Tynemouth, on the shore of the North sea. It had a length of 73 and a half miles. Parts of it were 18 feet high, and 8 feet thick.

On the northern side of the wall a big ditch was cut by the Romans. In some places this ditch was 15 feet deep and 35 feet wide.

Towers were built along the wall. They were one Roman mile apart, which is somewhat less than an English mile. There were 80 of these towers, and they served as "lookout stations" for the Romans.

Seymour Swelters Way to Win Over Clintonville, 6-3

Clusman Takes 'Stuka' In Highlight of Slow Northern State Game

NORTHERN STATE LEAGUE
	W. L. Pct.

Manitowoc	4 2 .667
Two Rivers	3 2 .600

SUNDAY'S RESULTS
Seymour 6, Clintonville 3.
New London at Two Rivers.
(Postponed, wet grounds.)
Manitowoc 2, New London 1.

A soggy heat and a slow diamond took the starch out of the boys as Seymour turned back Clintonville, 6 to 3, in a slow Northern State league game at Seymour yesterday.

It was the fifth win against one defeat for Manager Bill Rowe's charges in the second half pennant fight and it kept Seymour up on top of the heap.

The game did have its moments and the most unique one came in the seventh inning when Clusman, Seymour third sacker who is nearly as wide as he is tall, took a "Stuka" for a daisy-cutter smacked by Stief. Norm power-dived at the crack of the bat and both Clusman and the ball met on the first bounce. Looking like an oversized bump on a log, Clusman lay there with his face buried in the mud and probably was asking himself whether it was worth it all. Meanwhile, Stief had stopped midway to first base, apparently thinking Clusman stabbed the ball on the fly. Both men looked at each other and then Clusman scrambled for the ball. Stief cut for first base but Norm threw him out from a kneeling position.

Larry Rocco mounded for the winners and turned in a good performance as he struck out five, walked two and allowed eight hits. He was in trouble but once when the Truellers loaded the bases in the fifth inning. Good support pulled him out of the hole and Clintonville could bring in only one of the men. Jim Huffman twirled for the losers and worked plenty hard. He fanned four, walked one and was touched for a dozen safeties.

Scores Four Runs
If there's any other way of getting on base, Jacobs, Seymour second baseman who played four runs, probably would like to know about it. He reached first on a walk, on a hit, twice on errors and once when hit by a pitched ball. Lamers and Clusman led the Seymour hitting parade with the former getting three for two and the latter three for four. Bowers and Zuidmolder each authored doubles.

Three Truellers swatters, Halfman, Petek and Huffman, each got two for four. Halfman slapping a triple and Schauer and Huffman each getting two-baggers. Clintonville pulled three double plays in the first four innings. Manager Sid Felts might just as well have pitched yesterday for he spent most of the afternoon "warming up" in the bull pen.

Seymour took a 2-run lead in the first inning as Jacobs drew a walk and scored on a double by Bowers. Eggert singled to plate Bowers. Lamers grounded to Kersten at third who whipped the ball to Stief at second, forcing Eggert. Stief rifled it to Petek at first to catch Lamers. Zuidmolder poled a double but was left high and dry when Clusman tied to right field.

Truellers Break Ice
Clintonville broke into the scoring column in the third frame when Huffman singled, gained second on Stief's single and scooted for home on Ferzack's single. Seymour added a tally in its half of the third when Jacobs singled, went to second as Bowers rolled and, the pitcher overthrew to second, stole third and lit out for home when Lamers sacrificed.

Clintonville threatened Seymour's 3-1 lead in the fifth as Huffman doubled and Stief went to first on an error. Ferzack walked and Stief advanced to lead the bases. Huffman counted on Halfman's hit but three runners died on base as Seymour cut the rally short.

Seymour made it 4-2 in its half of the fifth when Jacobs reached first on an error, took second as Bowers grounded and third as Eggert followed suit. He tallied on a hit by Lamers. Seymour increased its lead to 6 to 2 in the seventh stanza as Jacobs got on via an error and scored on a safely by Bowers. Bowers took second and third on an overthrow at second and came in with the sixth run on a single by Lamers.

The Trucks scored their final marker in the ninth inning as Halfman tripled and scored when Clusman muffed Volkman's grounder.

TONIGHT'S GAMES
Appleton at Fond du Lac.
Rapid at Green Bay.
LaCrosse at Sheboygan.

The Appleton Papermakers closed their current home stand last night when they split two games with the Wisconsin Rapids Sox. The score of the first was 6 to 2 with the Rapids the winner; the score of the second was 11 to 4 with Appleton the winner over both the Rapids and the clock.

Tonight the Papermakers open a road jaunt against Fond du Lac. Lefty Greens, who holds the Indian sign over the Papermakers, probably will pitch for Fondy. Tuesday the locals again are at Fond du Lac, at Green Bay Wednesday and Thursday, at LaCrosse Friday and Saturday and at the Rapids Sunday and Monday.

Last night's program featured the stalling tactics of the Rapids and Appleton's attempt to get the second game over before 11:50. The contest started with plenty of time for 5, 6 or even 7 innings. But in the first frame each team got two runs and in the second Appleton pounded out six markers and it was obvious they'd have to hurry to finish.

Appleton scored a couple more in the third but the fourth was a travesty on baseball as the Rapids did everything imaginable to delay the game and Appleton ran loose on the bases to have men caught. Shoe strings were tied, pitcher and catcher conferred, the pitcher walked around the box on every pitch and tossed in a lot of wide ones. Once Danicak and Manager Parenti started to square off when Eddie's temper was aroused over the dilatory tactics.

As the game opened, with Norm McIntyre pitching for Appleton, C. Lorenz doubled. W. Lorenz lofted to third and Martignetti tripped to center. Muhr then doubled to score Martignetti.

Appleton tied the score without a single hit in its half the first. Malattia fanned but Danicak was safe at first when Martignetti dropped the ball from short. Hawk then rolled to Brand who tossed the ball to short but no Lorenz was there and all hands were safe with Danicak stopping at third. Chell rolled to short for another error with Danicak scoring. A few minutes later Brand tossed a bad one to second attempting to get a man leading off and Hawk legged it home.

In the second the Papermakers really went to town. Standard by Jim Blue in the eighth frame. He walked four but none even got beyond first base.

Decker toiled for the High Lites and allowed eight hits. In the third, Simon singled and came home on McCambridge's double while Vukich started the fourth with a 2-bagger and tallied on a follow-up by Wilda. Sucha, Ship shortstop, hit 1,000 percent in four trips but none of his blows counted.

Thursday night New London is to play at Clintonville.

Appleton girl softballers will have their hands full at Spencer field Tuesday evening for they will take on Oshkosh and Berlin in a Fox River Valley league doubleheader. The first game will begin at 8 o'clock. The Oshkosh Olsons, considered one of the best feminine softball teams in the state, will attempt to hand Appleton its second defeat of the season, the locals receiving their only loss by a 2 to 1 score earlier. Ragged base running and several errors contributed to the setback. Both teams will be battling to remain undefeated in second round play.

Maddy Horn, famous ice skate speedster, probably will be the starting pitcher for Oshkosh with Elizabeth Weber behind the plate. Kasten will toe the mound for the home team with Merkel donning the mask and pad.

The first half tilt still is up in the air because of a protested Appleton-Fond du Lac game. During a league meeting at Oshkosh Sunday, Fond du Lac won the protest but refused to travel to Appleton unless the latter would foot the bill. Appleton refused and Oshkosh offered the facilities of their diamond for Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5. Both teams agreed to this offer and the game will be split. The winner will meet Oshkosh for first round honors.

Sox are Set to Do Some Giant-Killing
BY TOM SILER
Chicago—(AP)—This is the week the hard-bitten Chicago White Sox have set aside for a bit of giant-killing.

The unpredictable but aggressive charges of Jimmy Dykes are never so happy as when knocking off some of their highly-touted American league rivals—and that's about the best thing they do. Beginning today the Sox engage second place Cleveland in four games in three days and follow up with five games in three days against league leading Detroit. Sandwiched in between the invasion of the two top teams is a night exhibition game at Waterloo, Ia., Thursday.

The Sox, put together by Dykes in bargain basement transactions, have been playing superlative baseball the past few weeks, climbing from far below the 500 mark to fourth place. Now they have their sights trained on third, two full games away, but won't admit to any higher hopes.

"Say, all we're trying to do is stay in first division," barked Dykes. "Nobody thinks we should even be in fourth place. Everybody tells us we haven't any business in first division."

"But somehow these boys don't believe it. They're really got the spirit. We're taking each team just as we come to it."

Dykes says Detroit is the team to watch.

Grand Forks Gains in Northern Ball Wheel
Minneapolis—(AP)—The Grand Forks Chiefs gained a little more ground in the Northern league race, increasing their lead to nine games by defeating Winnipeg, 6-3, as Duluth knocked off the second place Superior Blues, 8-6.

The victory sent Duluth into a tie with Crookston for fourth place as the latter's Pirates lost a 14-6 slugfest to the Fargo-Moorhead twins.

Wausau shoved Eau Claire farther into the cellar as Jack Christensen limited the Bears to five hits for a 7-2 triumph.

Midwest—Don Faurot, Missouri, 2,436,987; Frank Hood, Rockhurst college (Kansas City) 1,666,159. Far West—Buck Shaw, Santa Clara, 702,869; James Phelan, Washington, 474,103.

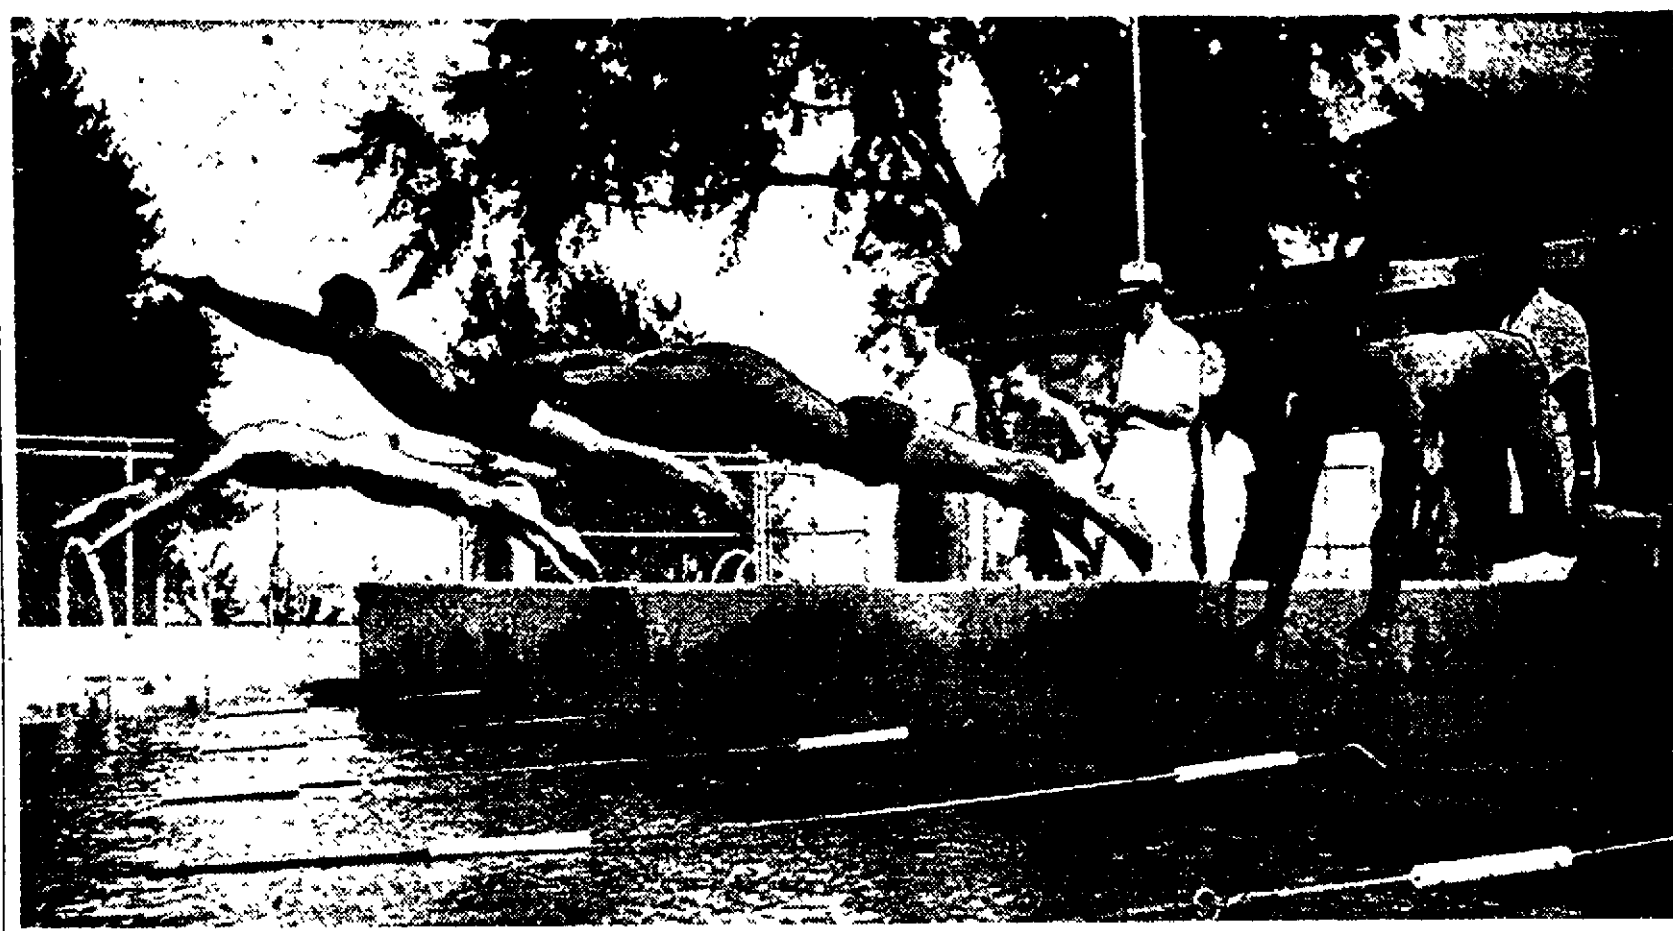

South—Lowell Dawson, Tulane, 709,764; Harry Mehre, Mississippi, 606,929.

St. Michaels, Md.—George Ward, Wilmington, Del. sets Class E racing inboard speedboat world record of 37.60 miles per hour.

Walter Hagen Wants Pros and Amateurs to Play Charity Match
BY EARL HILLIGAN
Walter Hagen—Mr. Golf himself—Walter Hagen—came out flatly today with an enthusiastic endorsement of the plan to send his Ryder cup professionals against the 10 best amateurs in the land—but he insisted that the amateur team for this suggested charity match be named by the United States Golf association.

"I think the idea of a Ryder cup amateur battle is a great one," said Hagen, perennial captain of the Ryder cup forces.

"In view of the cancellation of the international Ryder cup matches and the Walker cup matches—which were to have been played this month—I think a professional-amateur duel would do much to keep keeping alive the idea of international competition. But the amateur team, to give it real authority, should be named by the U. S. G. A. and not simply be the selection of any amateur star or other individuals."

The U. S. G. A. declined to name a Walker cup team for this year because the international matches were cancelled. The Professional Golfers association, however, named its Ryder cup aggregation which already has appeared in charity matches at Hollywood, Calif., Dallas, Texas, and Detroit.

If proper arrangements can be made we'll be glad to go to work on the details," Hagen said. "Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager for the P. G. A., could go ahead and work out plans for the match."

Marvin (Bud) Ward, the present national amateur champion, is known to favor the idea of the amateur-Ryder cup battle. He'd be certain to head the squad, which likely would include such other summer-pure aces as Ray Billows, runnerup to Ward at North Shore last year, Johnny Goodman, former amateur and open title holder, Johnny Fischer and Willie Turnesa, both former national amateur rulers, and Charley Yates, the former British amateur titlist.

Hagen said he'd pick his eight-man team from this Ryder cup squad—Sam Snead, Ralph Guldahl, Jimmy Hines, Byron Nelson, Horton Smith, Paul Runyan, Harold G. McSpaden, Vic Ghezzi, Dick Metz and Henry Picard, the present P. G. A. champion.

Vanden Boogaard's lineup will include Sarrihan, E. Van Boogaard, Walsh, Hofkins, Van Dyke, Courchane, Schwanke, Schense, D. Van Boogaard Huntington and Rev Hietnas.

Gossens lineup will include N. Gossens, Ole Gossens, Sonny Wildenberg, U. Wildenberg, J. Lem, T. Oudenhoven, M. DeGroot, J. Stein, and J. Wulterk us.

Gossens were the first round champs and thus far Vanden Boogaards are leading the second round with three wins and no defeats. Gossens have yet to win a game in the second round.

Ray Hamann, playground director, announced that the winning team will receive a pennant which will have the following inscription: "1940 champs, Kimberly Twilight League." A small charge of ten cents for adults and one cent for children will be made to help defray pennant costs.

Vanden Boogaards lineup will include Sarrihan, E. Van Boogaard, Walsh, Hofkins, Van Dyke, Courchane, Schwanke, Schense, D. Van Boogaard Huntington and Rev Hietnas.

Milwaukee H. S. Youth Dominates State Swimming Meet at Neenah

Neenah—Robins Middlemas, Milwaukee Bayview high school junior, took first place in three races at the first Wisconsin A. A. U. swimming meet held in Neenah's $160,000 pool Sunday afternoon.

The Milwaukee youth won the 200 meter freestyle in 2 minutes, 23.9 seconds, the 200 meter breast stroke in 3 minutes, 30.7 seconds, and the 800 meter freestyle race in 12 minutes, 19.6 seconds. He wasn't pressed in the last two events but made his best time in the 200 meter freestyle event in which he was pushed by Jerry Siefert, Oshkosh. The time set by Middlemas in that event was the best of the day, just nine-tenths of a second above the state record.

William J. Parry, Milwaukee, won the three meter diving championship for the fourth straight year with Kenneth Westberg, Menasha, former midwest collegiate conference champion, second. Fred Opperman, Wauwatosa, was third in the diving followed by David Bukysky, Menasha, and Vernon Jensen, Neenah.

Dorothy Ridgeway and Nancy Dowling, Neenah, and Margaret Thelin, Kimberly, were Fox valley entries in the women's 100 meter freestyle while Janet Wood, Neenah, took a fourth in the one meter diving.

Other local entries included R. W. Thickens, Menasha, and Charles Zingler, Neenah, in the 50 meter freestyle and Leonard Duchan, Neenah, in the 800 meter freestyle. Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs was the honorary referee and awarded medals to winners of first place in each of the three events.

John Bori, Milwaukee Athletic club, entertained with clown dives following the regular events. Two heats were conducted in the men's 50 meter freestyle only. R. D. Schimmel, Waukegan, won his heat and the race with a time of 27.9 seconds. Jerry Siefert, Oshkosh, won his heat but was second in the final standings with a time of 28 seconds followed by H. R. Frank, Milwaukee, with 28.1 seconds.

Results of the other men's races follow:
200 meter freestyle—R. Middlemas, Milwaukee; Jerry Siefert, Oshkosh; H. R. Frank, Milwaukee. Time 12:19.6.
800 meter freestyle—R. Middlemas, Milwaukee; R. Frederick, West Allis; Jerry Siefert, Oshkosh. Time 12:19.6.
200 meter breast stroke—R. Middlemas, Milwaukee; E. E. Dallman, Two Rivers. Time 3:30.7.
Results of the women's events follow:

One meter diving—Bette Levenhagen, West Allis; Ann Unger, Milwaukee; Florence Yochum, Madison. Time 1:26.3.

If proper arrangements can be made we'll be glad to go to work on the details," Hagen said. "Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager for the P. G. A., could go ahead and work out plans for the match."

City Garbage Disposal to be Council Topic

Aldermen Will Act On Equipment Bids for Municipal Collection

Kaukauna — The still unsettled question of municipal garbage collection will be the main order of business at the council meeting tomorrow night.

The council has had this question before it for a long time, and tomorrow night will decide on the bids for a truck and a garbage collection body. The bids will be opened at a meeting of the Board of Public Works and will be reviewed at the council meeting tomorrow night.

The garbage truck is to be a 14-ton truck chassis, suitable for mounting a garbage collection body of not less than six yards capacity. The garbage collection body must be fully enclosed and equipped with all necessary power take-offs and hoists. It must be painted white with "City of Kaukauna" lettered on the side.

The city council at its July 16 meeting rejected the bids for a truck and garbage collection body when several automobile dealers complained that the specifications as drawn up would fit only one make of a truck. The council had received only one bid for each item.

Among other matters to appear before the council tomorrow night will be the paying of bills and the reports of various committees. The police and fire commission and the board of public works have several items to be considered by the council.

Frank Mitchell is chairman of the dance committee for the Sesquicentennial ball. He will select his own committee.

The Owls made all their runs in the fifth inning with Theurys, Grebe, Kieffe, Driessen, and Bill Kuchelmeister doing the scoring honors for the Kaukauna team. La Follette and to the Senate commerce committee for their use in obtaining appropriations which would keep the river workers employed for a full year rather than for just the duration of the navigation season.

Frank Maslak of Milwaukee spent the weekend at the Frank Biselx home on Wisconsin avenue.
